

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE ANGEL IN THE HOUSE.

Is it not strange that there are innumerable hymns and poems composed for other gods, but that not one of the many poets who spring up in the world has ever composed a verse in honour of Love, who is such and so great a god !—PLATO.

THE PROLOGUE.

I.

"MINE is no horse with wings, to gain
"The region of the spheral chime ;
"He does but drag a rumbling wain,
"Cheer'd by the silver bells of rhyme ;
"And if at Fame's bewitching note
"My homely Pegasus pricks an ear,
"The world's cart-collar hugs his throat,
"And he's too wise to kick or rear."

2.

Thus ever answer'd Vaughan his wife,
Who, more than he, desired his fame ;
But, in his heart, his thoughts were rife
How for her sake to earn a name.

With bays poetic three times crown'd,
And other college honours won,
He, if he chose, might be renown'd,
He had but little doubt, she none ;
And in a loftier phrase he talk'd
With her, upon their Wedding-Day,
(The eighth), while through the fields they walk'd,
Their children shouting by the way.

3.

" Not careless of the gift of song,
" Nor out of love with noble fame,
" I, meditating much and long
" What I should sing, how win a name,
" Considering well what theme unsung,
" What reason worth the cost of rhyme,
" Remains to loose the poet's tongue
" In these last days, the dregs of time,
" Learn that to me, though born so late,
" There does, beyond desert, befall

" (May my great fortune make me great !)

" The first of themes sung last of all.

" In green and undiscover'd ground,

" Yet near where many others sing,

" I have the very well-head found

" Whence gushes the Pierian Spring."

4.

Then she: " What is it, Dear ? The Life

" Of Arthur, or Jerusalem's Fall ?"

" Neither : your gentle self, my wife,

" And love, that grows from one to all.

" And if I faithfully proclaim

" Of these the exceeding worthiness,

" Surely the sweetest wreath of Fame

" Shall, to your hope, my brows caress ;

" And if, by virtue of my choice

" Of this, the most heart-touching theme

" That ever tuned a poet's voice,

" I live, as I am bold to dream,

- “ To be delight to future days,
 “ And into silence only cease
“ When those are still, who shared their bays
 “ With Laura and with Beatrice,
“ Imagine, Dear, how learned men
 “ Will deep-conceived devices find,
“ Beyond my purpose and my ken,
 “ An ancient bard of simple mind !
“ You, Sweet, his Mistress, Wife, and Muse,
 “ Were you for mortal woman meant ?
“ Your praises give a hundred clues
 “ To mythological intent !
“ And, severing thus the truth from trope,
 “ In you the Commentators see,
“ Some Faith, some Charity, some Hope,
 “ Some, wiser, think you all the three.
“ Your arm’s on mine ! these are the meads
 “ In which we pass our living days ;
“ There Avon runs, now hid with reeds,
 “ Now brightly brimming pebbly bays ;

“ Those are our children’s songs that come
 “ With bells and bleatings of the sheep ;
“ And there, in yonder English home,
 “ We thrive on mortal food and sleep !”
She laugh’d. How proud she always was
 To see how proud he was of her !
But he had grown distraught, because
 The Muse’s mood began to stir.

5.

His purpose with performance crown’d,
 He, to his well-pleased wife, rehears’d,
When next their Wedding-Day came round,
 His leisure’s labour, “ Book the First.”

 PRELUDES.

I.

Love's Reality.

I WALK, I trust, with open eyes ;
 I've travell'd half my worldly course ;
 And in the way behind me lies
 Much vanity and some remorse ;
 I've lived to feel how pride may part
 Spirits, tho' match'd like hand and glove ;
 I've blush'd for love's abode, the heart ;
 But have not disbelieved in love ;
 Nor unto love, sole mortal thing
 Of worth immortal, done the wrong

To count it, with the rest that sing,
Unworthy of a serious song ;
And love is my reward ; for now,
When most of dead'ning time complain,
The myrtle blooms upon my brow,
Its odour quickens all my brain.

II.

Love's Immortality.

How vilely 'twere to misdeserve
The poet's gift of perfect speech,
In song to try, with trembling nerve,
The limit of its utmost reach,
Only to sound the wretched praise
Of what to-morrow shall not be,
So mocking with immortal bays
The cross-bones of mortality !
I do not thus. My faith is fast
That all the loveliness I sing
Is made to bear the mortal blast,
And blossom in a better Spring.
My creed affirms the ceaseless pact
Of body and spirit, soul and sense ;
Nor can my faith accept the fact,
And disavow the consequence.

III.

The Poet's Confidence.

THE richest realm of all the earth
Is counted still a heathen land :
Lo, I, like Joshua, now go forth
To give it into Israel's hand.
I've girt myself with thought and prayer,
And am endow'd with strength, like him,
Beyond my own, and will not fear
The false and foolish Anakim ;
Nor will I hearken blame or praise ;
For so should I dishonour do
To that sweet Power by which these Lays
Alone are lovely, good, and true ;
Nor credence to the world's cries give,
Which ever preach and still prevent
Pure passion's high prerogative
To make not follow precedent.

IV.

The Poet's Humility.

FROM love's abysmal ether rare
If I to men have here made known
New truths, they, like new stars, were there,
But only not yet written down.
Nor verse, nor art, nor plot, nor plan,
Nor aught of mine here's worth a toy :
Quit praise and blame, and, if you can,
Do, brother, for the nonce, enjoy.
Moving but as the feelings move,
I run, or loiter with delight,
Or stop to mark where gentle Love
Persuades the soul from height to height.
Yet, know, that, though my words are gay
As David's dance, which Michal scorn'd,
If rightly you peruse the Lay,
You shall be sweetly help'd and warn'd.

V.

The Impossibility.

OF all the impossibilities

Of love's achieving, surely none

So hopeless as to speak it is.

By love, in me, may this be done !

Lo, love's obey'd by all. 'Tis right

That all should know what they obey,

Lest erring conscience damp delight,

And folly laugh our joys away.

Thou Primal Love, who grantest wings

And voices to the woodland birds,

Grant me the power of saying things

Too simple and too sweet for words !

VI.

Heaven and Earth.

How long shall men deny the flower
Because its roots are in the earth,
And crave with tears from God the dower
They have, and have despised as dearth
And scorn as low their human lot,
With frantic pride, too blind to see
That standing on the head makes not
Either for ease or dignity !
But fools shall feel like fools to find,
(Too late inform'd,) that angels' mirth
Is one in cause, and mode, and kind
With that which they despised on earth.

THE CATHEDRAL CLOSE.

I.

ONCE more I came to Sarum Close,
With joy half memory, half desire,
And breathed the sunny wind that rose
And blew the shadows o'er the Spire,
And toss'd the lilac's scented plumes,
And sway'd the chestnut's thousand cones,
And fill'd my nostrils with perfumes,
And shaped the clouds in waifs and zones,
And wafted down the serious strain
Of Sarum bells, when, true to time,
I reach'd the Dean's, with heart and brain
That trembled to the trembling chime.

'Twas half my home six years ago.
The six years had not alter'd it :

Red-brick and ashlar, long and low,

With dormers and with oriels lit.

Geranium, lychnis, rose array'd

The windows, all wide open thrown ;

And some one in the Study play'd

The Wedding-March of Mendelssohn.

And there it was I last took leave :

'Twas Christmas : I remember'd now

The cruel girls, who feign'd to grieve,

Took down the evergreens ; and how

The laurel into blazes woke

The fire, lighting the large, low room,

A dim, rich lustre of old oak

And crimson velvet's glowing gloom.

3.

No change had touch'd Dean Churchill : kind,

By widowhood more than winters bent,

And settled in a cheerful mind,

As still forecasting heaven's content.

Well might his thoughts be fixed on high,
Now she was there! Within her face
Humility and dignity
Were met in a most sweet embrace.
She seem'd expressly sent below
To teach our erring minds to see
The rhythmic change of time's swift flow
As part of still eternity.
Her life, all honour, observed, with awe
Which cross experience could not mar,
The fiction of the Christian law
That all men honourable are;
And so her smile at once conferr'd
High flattery and benign reproof;
And I, a rude boy, strangely stirr'd,
Grew courtly in my own behoof.
The years, so far from doing her wrong,
Anointed her with gracious balm,
And made her brows more and more young
With wreaths of amaranth and palm.

Was this her eldest, Honor ; prude,
Who would not let me pull the swing ;
Who, kiss'd at Christmas, call'd me rude,
And sobb'd alone, and would not sing ?
How changed ! In shape no slender Grace,
But Venus ; milder than the dove ;
Her mother's air ; her Norman face ;
Her large sweet eyes, clear lakes of love.
Mary I knew. In former time
Ailing and pale, she thought that bliss
Was only for a better clime,
And, heavenly overmuch, scorn'd this.
I, rash with theories of the right,
Which stretch'd the tether of my Creed,
But did not break it, held delight
Half discipline. We disagreed.
She told the Dean I wanted grace.
Now she was kindest of the three,
And two wild roses deck'd her face.
And, what, was this my Mildred, she

To herself and all a sweet surprise ?
My Pet, who romp'd and roll'd a hoop ?
I wonder'd where those daisy eyes
Had found their touching curve and droop.

Unmannerly times ! But now we sat
Stranger than strangers ; till I caught
And answer'd Mildred's smile ; and that Spread to the rest, and freedom brought.
The Dean talk'd little, looking on,
Of three such daughters justly vain.
What letters they had had from Bonn !
Said Mildred ; and I told again
How the Bonn boys besieged the house
In fury metaphysical,
Because I'd proved their Doctor Strauss
A myth ; and how I fought them all
By Honor I was kindly task'd
To explain my never coming down

From Cambridge ; Mary smiled and ask'd
Were Kant and Goethe yet outgrown ?
And, pleased, we talk'd the old days o'er ;
And, parting, I for pleasure sigh'd.
To be there as a friend, (since more !)
Seem'd then, seems still, excuse for pride ;
For something that abode endued
With temple-like repose, an air
Of life's kind purposes pursued
With order'd freedom sweet and fair.
A tent pitch'd in a world not right
It seem'd, whose inmates, every one,
On tranquil faces bore the light
Of duties beautifully done,
And humbly, though they had few peers,
Kept their own laws, which seem'd to be
The fair sum of six 'thousand years'
Traditions of civility.

CANTO II.

Mary and Mildred.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Paragon.

WHEN I behold the skies aloft
 Passing the pageantry of dreams,
 The cloud whose bosom, cygnet-soft,
 A couch for nuptial Juno seems,
 The ocean broad, the mountains bright,
 The shadowy vales with feeding herds,
 I from my lyre the music smite,
 Nor want for justly matching words.
 All powers of the sea and air,
 All interests of hill and plain,

I so can sing, in seasons fair,
That who hath felt may feel again ;
Nay more, the gracious Muses bless
At times my tongue until I can,
With moving emphasis, express
The likeness of the perfect man.
Elated oft by such free songs,
I think with utterance free to raise
That hymn for which the whole world longs,
A worthy hymn in woman's praise ;
A hymn bright-noted like a bird's,
Arousing these song-sleepy times
With rhapsodies of perfect words,
Ruled by returning kiss of rhymes.
But when I look on her and hope
To tell with joy what I admire,
My thoughts lie cramp'd in narrow scope,
Or in the feeble birth expire ;
No skill'd complexity of speech,
No simple phrase of tenderest fall,
No liken'd excellence can reach
Her, the most excellent of all,

The best half of creation's best,
 Its heart to feel, its eye to see,
The crown and complex of the rest,
 Its aim and its epitome.
Nay, might I utter my conceit,
 'Twere after all a vulgar song,
For she's so simply, subtly sweet,
 My deepest rapture does her wrong.
Yet it is now my chosen task
 To sing her worth as Maid and Wife ;
Nor happier post than this I ask,
 To live her laureate all my life.
On wings of love uplifted free,
 And by her gentleness made great,
I'll teach how noble man should be
 To match with such a lovely mate ;
And then in her will move the more
 The woman's wish to be desired,
(By praise increased,) till both shall soar,
 With blissful emulations fired.
And, as geranium, pink, or rose
 Is thrice itself through power of art,

So may my happy skill disclose
New fairness even in her fair heart ;
Until that churl shall nowhere be,
Who bends not, awed, before the throne
Of her affecting majesty,
So meek, so far unlike our own ;
Until, (for who may hope too much
From her who wields the powers of love ?)
Our lifted lives at last shall touch
That happy goal to which they move ;
Until, we find, as darkness rolls
Away, and evil mists dissolve,
That nuptial contrasts are the poles
On which the heavenly spheres revolve.

II.

The Haven.

WHENEVER I come where women are,
How sad soe'er I was before,
Though like a ship frost-bound and far
Withheld in ice from the ocean's roar,
Third-winter'd in that dreadful dock,
With stiffen'd cordage, sails decay'd,
And crew that care for calm and shock
Alike, too dull to be dismay'd ;
Yet if I come where women are,
How sad soever I was before,
Then is my sadness banish'd far,
And I am like that ship no more ;
Or like that ship if the ice-field splits,
Burst by the sudden polar Spring,
And all thank God with their warming wits,
And kiss each other and dance and sing,

And hoist fresh sails, that make the breeze
 Blow them along the liquid sea,
Out of the North, where life did freeze,
 Into the haven where they would be.

III.

Love and Duty.

ANNE lived so truly from above,
She look'd so radiantly good,
That duty bade me fall in love,
And "but for that," thought I, "I should!"
I worshipp'd Kate with all my will.
In idle moods you seem to see
A noble spirit in a hill,
A human touch about a tree.

IV.

A Distinction.

THE lack of lovely pride, in her

Who strives to please, my pleasure numbs,
And still the maid I most prefer

Whose care to please with pleasing comes.

MARY AND MILDRED.

I.

ONE morning, after Church, I walk'd
 Alone with Mary on the Lawn,
 And felt myself, howe'er we talk'd,
 To grave themes delicately drawn.
 When she, delighted, found I knew
 More of her peace than she supposed,
 Our confidences heavenwards grew,
 Like fox-glove buds, in pairs disclosed.
 Our former faults did we confess,
 Our ancient feud was more than heal'd,
 And, with the woman's eagerness
 For amity full-sign'd and seal'd,
 She, offering up for sacrifice
 Her heart's reserve, brought out to show
 Some verses, made when she was ice
 To all but Heaven, six years ago ;

Since happier grown ! I took and read
The neat-writ lines. She, void of guile,
Too late repenting, blush'd, and said,
I must not think about the style.

“ Day after day, until to-day,
“ Imaged its fellows gone before,
“ The same dull task, the weary way,
“ The weakness pardon'd o'er and o'er,

“ The thwarted thirst, too faintly felt,
“ For joy's well-nigh forgotten life,
“ The restless heart, which, when I knelt,
“ Made of my worship barren strife.

“ Ah, whence to-day's so sweet release ;
“ This clearance light of all my care,
“ This conscience free, this fertile peace,
“ These softly folded wings of prayer

“ This calm and more than conquering love,
“ With which the Tempter dares not cope ;
“ This joy that lifts no glance above,
“ For faith too sure, too sweet for hope !

“ O, happy time, too happy change,
“ It will not live, though fondly nurst !
“ Full soon this Day will seem as strange
“ As now the Dark which seems dispersed.”

3.

She from a rose-tree shook the blight ;
And well she knew that I knew well
Her grace with silence to requite ;
And, answering now the luncheon-bell,
We laugh'd at Mildred's laugh, which made
All melancholy wrong, its mood
Such sweet self-confidence display'd,
So glad a sense of present good.

4.

We who are married, let us own
A bachelor's chief thought in life
Is, or the fool's not worth a groan,
To win a woman for his wife.
I kept the custom. I confess
I never went to Ball or Fête
Or Show, but in pursuit express
Of my predestinated mate ;
And thus to me, who had in sight
The happy chance upon the cards,
Each beauty blossom'd in the light
Of tender personal regards ;
And, in the records of my breast,
Red-lettered, eminently fair,
Stood sixteen, who, beyond the rest,
By turns till then had been my care :
At Berlin three, one at St. Cloud,
At Chatteris, near Cambridge, one,

At Ely four, in London two,
Two at Bowness, in Paris none,
And, last and best, in Sarum three ;
But dearest of the whole fair troop,
In judgment of the moment, she
Whose daisy eyes had learn'd to droop.
Her very faults my fancy fired ;
My loving will, so thwarted, grew ;
And, bent on worship, I admired
Whate'er she was, with partial view.
And yet when, as to-day, her smile
Was prettiest, I could not but note
Honorina, less admired the while,
Was lovelier, though from love remote.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Lover.

HE meets, by heavenly chance express,
 The destined maid ; some hidden hand
 Unveils to him that loveliness
 Which others cannot understand.
 No songs of love, no summer dreams
 Did e'er his longing fancy fire
 With vision like to this ; she seems
 In all things better than desire !
 His merits in her presence grow,
 To match the promise in her eyes,

And round her happy footsteps blow
The authentic airs of Paradise.
For joy of her he cannot sleep ;
Her beauty haunts him all the night
It melts his heart, it makes him weep
For wonder, worship, and delight.
O, paradox of love, he longs,
Most humble when he most aspires,
To suffer scorn and cruel wrongs
From her he honours and desires !
Her graces make him rich, and ask
No guerdon ; this imperial style
Affronts him ; he disdains to bask,
The pensioner of her priceless smile.
He prays for some hard thing to do,
Some work of fame and labour immense,
To stretch the languid bulk and thew
Of love's fresh-born magnipotence.
No smallest boon were bought too dear,
Though barter'd for his love-sick life ;

Yet trusts he, with undaunted cheer,
To vanquish heaven and call her wife.
He notes how queens of sweetness still
Neglect their crowns, and stoop to mate ;
How, self-consign'd with lavish will,
They ask but love proportionate ;
How swift pursuit by small degrees,
Love's tactic, works like miracle ;
How valour, clothed in courtesies,
Brings down the haughtiest citadel ;
And therefore, though he merits not
To kiss the braid upon her skirt,
His hope, discouraged ne'er a jot,
Out-soars all possible desert ;
Resistance only makes him gay ;
The fiercer fight the fairer she ;
In vain her distance says him nay ;
Hope, desperate grown, feigns certainty.

II.

'The Fount of Honour.

ME to my happy hymns of praise
Not only woman's graces stir ;
Myself I never seem to raise
So much as when I honour her ;
For while my songs so various run,
There lives before my constant mind
An image, time-endear'd, of one
Who is to me all womankind :
Honoriam call her : she confers
Bright honour when she breathes my name ;
Birth's blazon'd patents, shown with her's,
Are falsified and put to shame ;
The fount of honour is her smile ;
(I speak but as I feel and think,)
Yet pride consumes me not the while
I thence, with thirst unsated, drink ;

For as a queen, who may not find
Her peer in all the common earth,
Submits her meek and royal mind,
Espousing one of subject birth,
All barter of like gain above,
She raised me to her noble place,
And made my lordship of her love
The simple gift of her free grace.

III.

The Attainment.

You love ? That's high as you shall go ;
For 'tis as true as Gospel text,
Not noble then is never so,
Either in this world or the next.

HONORIA.

I.

GROWN weary with a week's exile
From those fair friends, I rode to see
The church-restorings ; lounged awhile,
And met the Dean ; was ask'd to tea,
And found their cousin, Frederick Graham,
At Honor's side. Was I concern'd,
If, when she sang, his colour came,
That mine, as with a buffet, burn'd ?
A man to please a girl ! thought I,
Retorting his forced smiles, the shrouds
Of wrath, so hid as she was by,
Sweet moon between her lighted clouds !

Whether this Cousin was the cause
I know not, but I seem'd to see,

The first time then, how fair she was,
How much the fairest of the three.
Each stopp'd to let the other go ;
But, time-bound, he arose the first.
Stay'd he in Sarum long ? If so
I hoped to see him at the Hurst.
No : he had call'd here, on his way
To Portsmouth, where the Arrogant,
His ship, was ; he should leave next day,
For two years' cruise in the Levant.

3.

Had love in her yet struck its germs ?
I watch'd. Her farewell shew'd me plain
She loved, on the majestic terms
That she should not be loved again.
And so her cousin, parting, felt.
Hope in his voice and eye was dead.
Compassion did my malice melt.
Then went I home to a restless bed.

I, who admired her too, could see
 His infinite remorse at this Great mystery, that she should be
 So beautiful, yet not be his,
And, pitying, long'd to plead his part ;
 But scarce could tell, so strange my whim,
Whether the weight upon my heart
 Was sorrow for myself or him.

4.

She was all mildness ; yet 'twas writ
 Upon her beauty legibly,
“ He that's for heaven itself unfit,
 “ Let him not hope to merit me.”
And such a challenge, quite apart
 From thoughts of love, humbled, and thus
To sweet repentance moved my heart,
 And made me more magnanimous,
And led me to review my life,
 Inquiring where in aught the least,

If question were of her for wife,
 Ill might be mended, hope increased.
Not that I soar'd so far above
 Myself, as this great hope to dare ;
And yet I well foresaw that love
 Might hope where reason must despair ;
And, half-resenting the sweet pride
 Which would not ask me to admire,
" Oh," to my secret heart I sigh'd,
 " That I were worthy to desire !"

5.

As drowsiness my brain relieved,
 A shrill defiance of all to arms,
Shriek'd by the stable-cock, received
 An angry answer from three farms.
And, then, I dreamt that I, her knight,
 A clarion's haughty pathos heard,
And rode securely to the fight,
 Cased in the scarf she had conferr'd ;

And there, the bristling lists behind,
Saw many, and vanquish'd all I saw
Of her unnumber'd cousin-kind,
In Navy, Army, Church, and Law ;
Smitten, the warriors somehow turn'd
To Sarum choristers, whose song,
Mixed with celestial sorrow, yearn'd
With joy no memory can prolong ;
And phantasms as absurd and sweet
Merged each in each in endless chace,
And everywhere I seem'd to meet
The haunting fairness of her face.

CANTO IV.

The Morning Call.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Rose of the World.

Lo, when the Lord made North and South
 And sun and moon ordained, He,
 Forthbringing each by word of mouth
 In order of its dignity,
 Did man from the crude clay express
 By sequence, and, all else decreed,
 He form'd the woman; nor might less
 Than Sabbath such a work succeed.
 And still with favour singled out,
 Marr'd less than man by mortal fall,

Her disposition is devout,
Her countenance angelical ;
The best things that the best believe
Are in her face so kindly writ
The faithless, seeing her, conceive,
Not only heaven, but hope of it ;
No idle thought her instinct shrouds,
But fancy chequers settled sense,
Like alteration of the clouds
On noonday's azure permanence ;
Pure dignity, composure, ease,
Declare affections nobly fix'd,
And impulse sprung from due degrees
Of sense and spirit sweetly mix'd ;
Her modesty, her chiefest grace,
The cestus clasping Venus' side,
Is potent to deject the face
Of him who would affront its pride ;
Wrong dares not in her presence speak,
Nor spotted thought its taint disclose
Under the protest of a cheek
Outbragging Nature's boast the rose.

In mind and manners how discreet !
How artless in her very art ;
How candid in discourse ; how sweet
The concord of her lips and heart ;
How simple and how circumspect ;
How subtle and how fancy-free ;
Though sacred to her love, how deck'd
With unexclusive courtesy ;
How quick in talk to see from far
The way to vanquish or evade ;
How able her persuasions are
To prove, her reasons to persuade ;
How, (not to call true instinct's bent
And woman's very nature, harm,)
How amiable and innocent
Her pleasure in her power to charm ;
How humbly careful to attract,
Though crown'd with all the soul desires,
Connubial aptitude exact,
Diversity that never tires.

II.

The Tribute.

Boon Nature to the woman bows.
She walks in all its glory clad,
And, chief herself of earthly shows,
Each other helps her, and is glad,
No splendour 'neath the sky's proud dome
But serves for her familiar wear;
The far-fetch'd diamond finds its home
Flashing and smouldering in her hair;
For her the seas their pearls reveal;
Art and strange lands her pomp supply
With purple, chrome, and cochineal,
Ochre, and lapis lazuli;
The worm its golden woof presents;
Whatever runs, flies, dives, or delves,
All doff for her their ornaments,
Which suit her better than themselves;

And all, by this their power to give,
Proving her right to take, proclaim
Her beauty's clear prerogative
To profit so by Eden's blame.

III.

Compensation.

THAT nothing here may want its praise,
Know, she who in her dress reveals
A fine and modest taste, displays
More loveliness than she conceals.

THE MORNING CALL

I.

- “ By meekness charm’d, or proud to allow “ A queenly claim to live admired,
“ Full many a lady has ere now
 “ My apprehensive fancy fired,
“ And woven many a transient chain ;
 “ But never lady like to this,
“ Who holds me as the weather-vane
 “ Is held by yonder clematis.
“ She seems the life of nature’s powers ;
 “ Her beauty is the genial thought
“ Which makes the sunshine bright ; the flowers,
 “ But for their hint of her, were nought.”

2.

- A voice, the sweeter for the grace
 Of suddenness, while thus I dream’d,

“Good morning !” said or sang. Her face
The mirror of the morning seem’d.
Her sisters in the garden walk’d,
And would I come ? Across the Hall
She took me ; and we laugh’d and talk’d
About the Flower-show and the Ball.
Their pinks had won a spade for prize ;
But this was gallantly withdrawn
For ‘ Jones on Wiltshire Butterflies !’
Allusive ! So we paced the lawn,
Close-cut, and with geranium-plots,
A rival glow of green and red ;
Then counted sixty apricots
On one small tree ; the gold-fish fed ;
And watch’d where, black with scarlet tans,
Proud Psyche stood and flash’d like flame,
Showing and shutting splendid fans ;
And in the prize we found its name.

3.

The sweet hour lapsed, and left my breast
A load of joy and tender care ;

And this delight, which life oppress'd,
To fix'd aims grew, that ask'd for pray'r.
I rode home slowly ; whip-in-hand
And soil'd bank-notes all ready, stood
The Farmer who farm'd all my land,
Except the little Park and Wood ;
And, with the accustomed compliment
Of talk, and beef, and frothing beer,
I, my own steward, took my rent,
Three hundred pounds for half the year ;
Our witnesses the Maid and Groom,
We sign'd the lease for seven years more,
And bade Good-day ; then to my room
I went, and closed and lock'd the door,
And cast myself down on my bed,
And there, with many a blissful tear,
I vow'd to love and pray'd to wed
The maiden who had grown so dear ;
Thank'd God who had set her in my path ;
And promised, as I hoped to win,
I never would sully my faith
By the least selfishness or sin ;

Whatever in her sight I'd seem
I'd really be ; I'd never blend
With my delight in her a dream
'Twould change her cheek to comprehend ;
And, if she wish'd it, I'd prefer
Another's to my own success ;
And always seek the best for her,
With unofficial tenderness.

4.

Rising, I breathed a brighter clime,
And found myself all self above,
And, with a charity sublime,
Contemn'd not those who did not love ;
And I could not but feel that then
I shone with something of her grace,
And went forth to my fellow men
My commendation in my face.

CANTO V.

The Violets.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Parallel.

I KNOW not how to her it seems,
 Or how to a perfect judging eye,
 But, as my loving thought esteems,
 Man misdeserves his sweet ally.
 Where she succeeds with cloudless brow,
 In common and in holy course,
 He fails, in spite of prayer and vow
 And agonies of faith and force ;
 Or, if his suit with Heaven prevails
 To righteous life, his virtuous deeds

Lack beauty, virtue's badge ; she fails
More graciously than he succeeds.
Her spirit, compact of gentleness,
If Heaven postpones or grants her prayer,
Conceives no pride in its success,
And in its failure no despair ;
But his, enamour'd of its hurt,
Baffled, blasphemes, or, not denied,
Crows from the dunghill of desert,
And wags its ugly wings for pride.
He's never young nor ripe ; she grows
More infantine, auroral, mild,
And still the more she lives and knows
The lovelier she's express'd a child.
Say that she wants the will of man
To conquer fame, not check'd by cross,
Nor moved when others bless or ban ;
She wants but what to have were loss.
Or say she holds no seals of power,
But humbly lives her life at school ;

•

Alas, we have yet to hail the hour
When God shall clothe the best with rule.
Or say she wants the patient brain
To track shy truth ; her facile wit
At that which he hunts down with pain
Flies straight, and does exactly hit.
Were she but half of what she is,
He twice himself, mere love alone,
Her special crown, as truth is his,
Gives title to the loftier throne ;
For love is substance, truth the form ;
Truth without love were less than nought ;
But blindest love is sweet and warm,
And full of truth not shaped by thought ;
And therefore in herself she stands
Adorn'd with undeficient grace,
Her happy virtues taking hands,
Each smiling in another's face
So, dancing round the Tree of Life,
They make an Eden in her breast,

While his, disjointed and at strife,
Proud-thoughted, do not bring him rest,
But ever groan and gasp for dearth
Of that in her with which they agree,
Like rude base notes, of little worth
Till married to their melody.
Her privilege, not impotence,
Exempts her from the work of man :
Humbling his proper excellence,
Jean d'Arc led war's obstreperous van.
No post of policy or pride
Does Heaven from her holding grudge ;
Miriam and Anna prophesied,
In Israel Deborah was judge.
How many Christian heroines
Have blest the world, and still do bless !
The praise their equal courage wins
Is tenfold through their tenderness ;
And, ah, sad times gone by, denied
The joyfullest omen ever seen,

The full-grown Lion's power and pride
 Led by the soft hand of a Queen !
Yet, lest my tender-thoughted strain
 Should seem to doubt the right decree
Of Him who made the human twain
 Conjoin'd in this disparity,
My Song declares what heavenly art
 Completes her wealth with his defect,
And, in love's high exacting mart,
 Pays poor desert with rich respect ;
And makes this much unequal pair
 Well-match'd in all that love requires,
If she's incomparably fair,
 And he but worthily admires.

II.

Love in Tears.

If fate Love's dear ambition mar,
And load his breast with hopeless pain,
And seem to blot out sun and star,
Love, lost or won, is countless gain ;
His sorrow boasts a secret bliss
Which sorrow of itself beguiles,
And Love in tears too noble is
For pity, save of Love in smiles.
But looking backward through his tears,
With vision of maturer scope,
How often one dead joy appears
The platform of some better hope !
And, let us own, the sharpest smart
Which human patience may endure
Pays light for that which leaves the heart
More generous, dignified, and pure.

III.

Prospective Faith.

THEY safely walk in darkest ways
Whose youth is lighted from above,
Where, through the senses' silvery haze,
Dawns the veil'd moon of nuptial love.
Who is the happy husband? He
Who, scanning his unwedded life,
Thanks Heaven, with a conscience free,
'Twas faithful to his future wife.

IV.

Venus Victrix.

FATAL in force, yet gentle in will,
Defeats, from her, are tender pacts,
For, like the kindly lodestone, still
She's drawn herself by what she attracts.

THE VIOLETS.

I.

I WENT not to the Dean's unbid,
 For I'd not have my mystery,
 From her so delicately hid,
 Discuss'd by gossips at their tea.
 A long, long week, and not once there,
 Had made my spirit sick and faint,
 And lack-love, foul as love is fair,
 Perverted all things to complaint.
 How vain the world had grown to be !
 How mean all people and their ways,
 How ignorant their sympathy,
 And how impertinent their praise ;
 What they for virtuousness esteem'd,
 How far removed from heavenly right ;

What pettiness their trouble seem'd,
How undelightful their delight ;
To my necessity how strange
The sunshine and the song of birds ;
How dull the clouds' continual change,
How foolishly content the herds ;
How unaccountable the law
Which bade me sit in blindness here,
While she, the sun by which I saw,
Shed splendour in an idle sphere !
And then I kiss'd her stolen glove,
And sigh'd to reckon and define
The modes of martyrdom in love,
And how far each one might be mine.
I thought how love, whose vast estate
Is earth and air and sun and sea,
Encounters oft the beggar's fate,
Despised on score of poverty ;
How Heaven, inscrutable in this,
Lets the gross general make or mar

The destiny of love, which is
 So tender and particular ;
How nature, as unnatural
 And contradicting nature's source,
Which is but love, seems most of all
 Well-pleased to harry true love's course ;
How, many times, it comes to pass
 That trifling shades of temperament,
Affecting only one, alas,
 Not love, but love's success prevent ;
How manners often falsely paint
 The man ; how passionate respect,
Hid by itself, may bear the taint
 Of coldness and a dull neglect ;
And how a little outward dust
 Can a clear merit quite o'ercloud,
And make her fatally unjust,
 And him desire a darker shroud ;
How senseless opportunity
 Gives baser men the better chance ;

How powers, adverse else, agree
To cheat her in her ignorance ;
How Providence itself conspires
With man and nature against love,
As pleased to couple cross desires,
And cross where they themselves approve.
Wretched were life, if the end were now !
But this gives tears to dry despair,
Faith shall be blest, we know not how,
And love fulfill'd, we know not where.

While thus I grieved, and kiss'd her glove,
My man brought in her note to say,
Papa had bid her send his love,
And would I dine with them next day ?
They had learn'd and practised Purcell's glee,
To sing it by to-morrow night.
The Postscript was : Her sisters and she
Inclosed some violets, blue and white ;

She and her sisters found them where

I wager'd once no violets grew ;

So they had won the gloves. And there

The violets lay, two white, one blue.

CANTO VI.

The Dean.

PRELUDES.

I.

Perfect Love rare.

Most rare is still most noble found,
 Most noble still most incomplete ;
 Sad law, which leaves King Love uncrown'd
 In this obscure, terrestrial seat !
 With bale more sweet than others' bliss,
 And bliss more wise than others' bale,
 The secrets of the world are his,
 And freedom without let or pale.
 O, zealous good, O, virtuous glee,
 Religious, and without alloy,

O, privilege high, which none but he
 Who highly merits can enjoy ;
O, Love, who art that fabled sun
 Which all the world with bounty loads,
Without respect of realms, save one,
 And gilds with double lustre Rhodes ;
A day of whose delicious life,
 Though full of terrors, full of tears,
Is better than of other life
 A hundred thousand million years ;
Thy heavenly splendour magnifies
 The least commixture of earth's mould,
Cheapens thyself in thine own eyes,
 And makes the foolish mocker bold.

II.

Love Justified.

WHAT if my pole-star of respect
Be dim to others, shall their "Nay,"
Presumably their own defect,
Invalidate my heart's strong "Yea?"
And can they rightly me condemn,
If I, with partial love, prefer?
I am not more unjust to them,
But only not unjust to her.
Leave us alone! After awhile,
This pool of private charity
Shall make its continent an isle,
And roll, a world-embracing sea;
This foolish zeal of lip for lip,
This fond, self-sanctioned, wilful zest,
Is that elect relationship
Which forms and sanctions all the rest;

This little germ of nuptial love,
Which springs so simply from the sod,
The root is, as my song shall prove,
Of all our love to man and God.

III.

Love Serviceable.

WHAT measure Fate to him shall mete
Is not the noble Lover's care;
He's heart-sick with a longing sweet
To make her happy as she's fair.
O, horror, should she him refuse,
And so her dearest good mistake !
His own success he thus pursues
With frantic zeal for her sole sake.
To lose her were his life to blight,
Being loss to hers ; to make her his,
Except as helping her delight,
He calls but incidental bliss ;
And, holding life as so much pelf
To buy her posies, learns this lore :
He does not rightly love himself
Who does not love another more.

IV.

Love a Virtue.

STRONG passions mean weak will, and he
Who truly knows the strength and bliss
Which are in love, will own with me
No passion but a virtue 'tis.
Few hear my word ; it soars above
The subtlest senses of the swarm
Of wretched things which know not love,
Their Psyche still a wingless worm.
Ice-cold strikes heaven's noble glow
To spirits whose vital heat is hell ;
And to corrupt hearts even so
The songs I sing, the tale I tell.
These cannot see the robes of white
In which I sing of love. Alack,
But darkness shows in heavenly light,
Though whiteness, in the dark, is black !

V.

A Riddle Solved.

KIND souls, you wonder why, love you,
When you, you wonder why, love none.
We love, Sir, for the good we do,
Not that which unto us is done.

THE DEAN.

1.

THE Ladies rose. I held the door,
And sigh'd, as her departing grace
Assured me that she always wore
A heart as happy as her face ;
And, jealous of the winds that blew,
I dreaded, o'er the tasteless wine,
What fortune momentarily might do
To hurt the hope that she'd be mine.

2.

Towards my mark the Dean's talk set :
He praised my " Notes on Abury,"
Read when the Association met
At Sarum ; he was glad to see

I had not stopp'd, as some men had,
At Wrangler and Prize Poet ; last,
He hoped the business was not bad
I came about : then the wine pass'd.

3.

A full glass prefaced my reply :
I loved his daughter, Honor ; he knew
My estate and prospects ; might I try
To win her ? To mine eyes tears flew.
He thought 'twas that. I might. He gave
His true consent, if I could get
Her love. A dear, good Girl ! she'd have
Only three thousand pounds as yet ;
• More bye and bye. Yes, his good will
Should go with me ; he would not stir ;
He and my father in old time still
Wish'd I should one day marry her ;
But God so seldom lets us take
Our chosen pathway, when it lies

In steps that either mar or make
Or alter others' destinies,
That, though his blessing and his prayer
Had help'd, should help, my suit, yet he Left all to me, his passive share
Consent and opportunity.
My chance, he hoped, was good : I'd won
Some name already ; friends and place
Appear'd within my reach, but none
Her mind and manners would not grace.
Girls love to see the men in whom
They invest their vanities admired ;
Besides, where goodness is, there room
For good to work will be desired.
'Twas so with one now past away ;
And what she was at twenty-two,
Honor was now ; and he might say
Mine was a choice I could not rue.

4.

He ceased, and gave his hand. He had won,
(And all my heart was in my word),

From me the affection of a son,
 Whichever fortune Heaven conferr'd !
Well, well, would I take more wine ? Then go
 To her ; she makes tea on the Lawn
These fine warm afternoons. And so
 We went whither my soul was drawn ;
And her light-hearted ignorance
 Of interest in our discourse
Fill'd me with love, and seem'd to enhance
 Her beauty with pathetic force,
As, through the flowery mazes sweet,
 Fronting the wind that flutter'd blythe,
And loved her shape, and kiss'd her feet,
 Shewn to their insteps proud and lithe,
She approach'd, all mildness and young trust ;
 And ever her chaste and noble air
Gave to love's feast its choicest gust,
 A vague, faint augury of despair.

CANTO VII.

Aetna and the Moon.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Prodigal.

To heroism and holiness

How hard it is for man to soar,

But how much harder to be less

Than what his mistress loves him for !

There is no man so full of pride,

And none so intimate with shame,

And none to manhood so denied,

As not to mend if women blame.

He does with ease what do he must,

Or merit this, and nought's debarr'd

From man, when woman shall be just
In yielding her desired regard.
Ah, wasteful woman, she who may
On her sweet self set her own price,
Knowing he cannot choose but pay,
How has she cheapen'd paradise ;
How given for nought her priceless gift,
How spoil'd the bread and spill'd the wine,
Which, spent with due, respective thrift,
Had made brutes men, and men divine.

II.

The Preacher taught,

“HER fairness is but painted flesh ;
Read here ; immortal beauty drink !”
“For that my tears flow still afresh ;
But what’s this ? Rags and Printers’ ink !”
“Fix eyes on Heaven !” “My grateful sight
Adores the Sun’s reflected power,
And loves acceptably the Light
Loving its colours in the flower.”
“In love keep bounds !” “More sense befall
Thy sanctity, and make it less !
Be sure I will not love at all
Where all my love would be excess.”

III.

"For ever."

DOUBTS of eternity ne'er cross

The Lover's faith, divinely clear ;

For ever is the gain or loss

Which maddens him with hope or fear ;

So trifles serve for his relief,

And trifles make him sick and pale ;

And yet his pleasure and his grief

Are both on a majestic scale.

The chance, indefinitely small,

Of issue infinitely great,

Eclipses finite interests all,

And has the dignity of fate.

IV.

The Metamorphosis.

MAID, choosing man, remember this :

 You take his nature with his name.

Ask, too, what his religion is,

 For you will soon be of the same.

ÆTNA AND THE MOON.

I.

To ease my heart, I, feigning, seized
A pen, and, showering tears, declared
My unfeign'd passion ; sadly pleased
Only to dream that so I dared.
Thus was the fervid truth confess'd,
But wild with paradox ran the plea,
As wilfully in hope depress'd,
Yet bold beyond hope's warranty :

2.

"O, more than dear, be more than just,
"And do not deafly shut the door !

- “ I claim no right to speak ; I trust
 “ Mercy, not right ; yet who has more ?
 “ For, if more love makes not more fit,
 “ Of claimants here none’s more nor less,
 “ Since your great worth does not permit
 “ Degrees in our unworthiness.
 “ Yet, if there’s aught that can be done
 “ With arduous labour of long years,
 “ By which you’ll say that you’ll be won,
 “ O tell me, and I’ll dry my tears.
 “ Ah, no ; if loving cannot move,
 “ How foolishly must labour fail !
 “ The use of deeds is to show love ;
 “ If signs suffice let these avail :
 “ Your name pronounced brings to my heart
 “ A feeling like the violet’s breath,
 “ Which does so much of heaven impart
 “ It makes me yearn with tears for death ;
 “ The winds that in the garden toss
 “ The Guelder-roses give me pain,

- “ Alarm me with the dread of loss,
“ Exhaust me with the dream of gain ;
“ I'm troubled by the clouds that move ;
“ Thrill'd by the breath which I respire ;
“ And ever, like a torch, my love,
“ Thus agitated, flames the higher ;
“ All's hard that has not you for goal ;
“ I scarce can move my hand to write,
“ For love engages all my soul,
“ And leaves the body void of might ;
“ The wings of will spread idly as do
“ The bird's that in a vacuum lies ;
“ My breast, asleep with dreams of you,
“ Forgets to breathe, and bursts in sighs ;
“ I see no rest this side the grave,
“ No rest or hope from you apart ;
“ Your life is in the rose you gave,
“ Its perfume suffocates my heart ;
“ There's no refreshment in the breeze ;
“ The heaven o'erwhelms me with its blue ;

- “ I faint beside the dancing seas ;
 “ Winds, skies, and waves are only you ;
 “ The thought or act which not intends
 “ You service, seems a sin and shame ;
 “ In that one only object ends
 “ Conscience, religion, honour, fame.
 “ Yet think not, Dear, that, thus engaged,
 “ These drop their heavenly function ; no,
 “ They simply bow where Heaven’s presaged
 “ In semblance of the liveliest show.
 “ Ah, could I put off love ! Could we “ Never have met ! What calm, what ease
 “ Nay, but, alas, this remedy
 “ Were ten times worse than the disease ;
 “ For when, indifferent, I pursue
 “ The world’s best pleasures for relief,
 “ My heart, still sickening back to you,
 “ Finds none like memory of its grief ;
 “ And, though ’twere very hell to hear
 “ You felt such misery as I,

" All good, save you, were far less dear
 " Than is that ill with which I die !
" Where'er I go, wandering forlorn,
 " You are the world's love, life, and glee :
" O, wretchedness not to be borne
 " If she that's Love should not love me !"

3.

I could not write another word,
 Through pity for my own distress ;
And forth I went, untimely stirr'd
 To make my misery more or less.
I went, beneath the heated noon,
 To where, in her simplicity,
She sat at work ; and, as the Moon
 On Ætna smiles, she smiled on me ;
But, now and then, in cheek and eyes,
 I saw, or fancied, such a glow
As when, in summer-evening skies,
Some say " It lightens," some say " No."

“Honoriam,” I began——No more.

The Dean, by ill or happy hap,
Came home ; and Wolf burst in before,
And put his nose upon her lap.

CANTO VIII.

Sarum Plain.

PRELUDES.

I.

Life of Life.

WHAT's that, which, ere I spake, was gone !

So joyful and intense a spark

That, whilst o'erhead the wonder shone,

The day, before but dull, grew dark ?

I do not know ; but this I know,

That, had the splendour lived a year,

The truth that I some heavenly show

Did see, could not be now more clear.

This know I too : might mortal breath

Express the passion then inspired,

Evil would die a natural death,
And nothing transient be desired ;
And error from the soul would pass,
And leave the senses pure and strong
As sunbeams. But the best, alas,
Has neither memory nor tongue.

II.

The Revelation.

AN idle poet, here and there,
Looks round him, but, for all the rest,
The world, unfathomably fair,
Is duller than a witling's jest.
Love wakes men, once a life-time each ;
They lift their heavy lids, and look ;
And, lo, what one sweet page can teach
They read with joy, then shut the book.
And some give thanks, and some blaspheme,
And most forget ; but, either way,
That and the Child's unheeded dream
Is all the light of all their day.

III.

The Spirit's Epochs.

Not in the crises of events,
Of compass'd hopes, or fears fulfill'd,
Or acts of gravest consequence,
Are life's delight and depth reveal'd.
The day of days was not the day ;
That went before, or was postponed ;
The night Death took our lamp away
Was not the night on which we groan'd.
I drew my bride, beneath the moon,
Across my threshold ; happy hour !
But, ah, the walk that afternoon
We saw the water-flags in flower !

IV.

The Prototype.

Lo, there, whence love, life, light are pour'd,
 Veil'd with impenetrable rays,
Amidst the presence of the Lord
 Co-equal Wisdom laughs and plays.
Female and male God made the man ;
 His image is the whole, not half ;
And in our love we dimly scan
 The love which is between Himself.

V.

The Praise of Love.

SPIRIT of Knowledge, grant me this :

A simple heart and subtle wit

To praise the thing whose praise it is

That all which can be praised is it.

SARUM PLAIN.

I.

BRIEF worship done, which still endows
 The day with beauty not its own ;
 Breakfast enjoy'd, 'mid hush of boughs
 And perfumes thro' the windows blown ;
 With intervening pause, that paints
 Each act with honour, life with calm,
 (As old processions of the Saints
 At every step have wands of palm),
 We rose ; the ladies went to dress,
 And soon return'd with smiles ; and then,
 Plans fix'd, to which the Dean said Yes,
 Once more we drove to Salisbury Plain.
 We past my house, (observed with praise
 By Mildred, Mary acquiesced),
 And left the old and lazy greys
 Below the hill, and walk'd the rest.

2.

The moods of love are like the wind,
And none knows whence or why they rise,
I ne'er before felt heart and mind
So much affected through mine eyes.
How cognate with the flatter'd air,
How form'd for earth's familiar zone,
She moved ; how feeling and how fair
For other's pleasure and her own ;
And, ah, the heaven of her face !
How, when she laugh'd, I seem'd to see
The gladness of the primal grace,
And how, when grave, its dignity !
Of all she was, the least not less
Delighted the devoted eye ;
No fold or fashion of her dress
Her fairness did not sanctify ;
Better it seem'd as now to walk,
And humbly by her gentle side
Observe her smile and hear her talk,
Then call the world's next best my bride.

I could not else than grieve. What cause?

Was I not blest? Was she not there?

Likely my own? Ah, that it was .

How like seem'd 'likely' to despair?

3.

And yet to see her so benign,

So honourable and womanly,

In every maiden kindness mine,

And full of gayest courtesy,

Was pleasure so without alloy,

Such unreprieved, sufficient bliss,

I almost wish'd, the while, that joy

Might never further go than this.

I feign'd her won : the mind finite,

Puzzled and fagg'd by stress and strain

To comprehend the whole delight,

Made bliss more hard to bear than pain

All good, save heart to hold, so summ'd

And grasp'd, it smote me like a knife

The Fall had narrow'd, dull'd and numb'd
The feelings to the feast of life ;
Whence passing good breathes sweetest breath ;
And love itself at highest reveals
More black than bright, commending death
By teaching how much life conceals.

4.

But happier passions these subdued,
When from the close and sultry lane,
With eyes made bright by what they view'd,
We emerged upon the mounded Plain.
As to the breeze a flag unfurls
My spirit expanded, sweetly embraced
By those same gusts that shook her curls
And vex'd the ribbon at her waist.
To the future cast I future cares ;
Breathed with a heart unfreighted, free,
And laugh'd at the presumptuous airs
That with her muslins folded me ;

Till, one vague rack along my sky,
The thought that she might ne'er be mine
Lay half forgotten by the eye
So feasted with the sun's warm shine.

5.

By the great stones we chose our ground
For shade ; and there, in converse sweet,
Took luncheon. On a little mound
Sat the three ladies ; at their feet,
I sat ; and smelt the heathy smell,
Pluck'd hare-bells, turn'd the telescope
To the country round. My life went well,
For once, without the wheels of hope ;
And I despised the Druid rocks
That scowl'd their chill gloom from above,
Like churls whose stolid wisdom mocks
The lightness of immortal love.
And, as we talk'd, my spirit quaff'd
The sparkling winds ; the candid skies

At our untruthful strangeness laugh'd ;
I kiss'd with mine her smiling eyes ;
And sweet familiarness and awe
Prevail'd that hour on either part,
And in the eternal light I saw
That she was mine ; though yet my heart
Could not conceive, nor would confess
Such contentation ; and there grew
More form and more fair stateliness
Than heretofore, between us two.

CANTO IX.

Sahara.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Wife's Tragedy.

MAN must be pleased ; but him to please
 Is woman's pleasure ; down the gulf
 Of his condoled necessities
 She casts her best, she flings herself.
 How often flings for nought ! and yokes
 Her heart to an icicle or whim,
 Whose each impatient word provokes
 Another, not from her, but him ;
 While she, too gentle even to force
 His penitence by kind replies,

Waits by, expecting his remorse,
With pardon in her pitying eyes ;
And if he once, by shame oppress'd,
A comfortable word confers,
She leans and weeps against his breast,
And seems to think the sin was hers ;
And whilst his love has any life,
Or any eye to see her charms,
At any time, she's still his wife,
Dearly devoted to his arms ;
She loves with love that cannot tire ;
And when, ah woe, she loves alone,
Through passionate duty love flames higher,
As grass grows taller round a stone.

II.

Common Graces.

O MAN, (and Legion is thy name,)
 Who hadst for dowry with thy wife
A conduct void of outward blame,
 The beauty of a loyal life,
Is nature in thee too spiritless,
 Ignoble, impotent, and dead,
To prize her love and loveliness
 The more for being thy daily bread ?
And art thou one of that vile crew
 Which see no splendour in the sun,
Praising alone the good that's new,
 Or over, or not yet begun ?
And has it dawn'd on thy dull wits
 That love warms many as soft a nest,
That, though swathed round with benefits,
 Thou art not singularly blest ?

And fail thy thanks for gifts divine,
The common food of many a heart,
Because they are not only thine ?
Beware lest in the end thou art
Cast as a goat forth from the fold,
Too proud to feel the common grace
Of blissful myriads who behold
For evermore the Father's face.

III.

The Zest of Life.

GIVE thanks. It is not time misspent ;
Worst fare this betters, and the best,
Wanting this natural condiment,
Breeds crudeness, and will not digest.
The grateful love the Giver's law ;
But those who eat, and look no higher,
From sin or doubtful sanction draw
The biting sauce their feasts require.
Give thanks for nought, if you've no more,
And, having all things, do not doubt
That nought, with thanks, is blest before
Whate'er the world can give, without.

IV.

Fool and Wise.

ENDOW the fool with sun and moon,
Being his, he holds them mean and low,
But to the wise a little boon
Is great, because the giver's so.

SAHARA.

I.

I stood by Honor and the Dean,
 They seated in the London train.
 A month from her ! yet this had been,
 Ere now, without such bitter pain.
 But neighbourhood makes parting light,
 And distance remedy has none ;
 Alone, she near, I felt as might
 A blind man sitting in the sun ;
 She near, all for the time was well ;
 Hope's self, when we were far apart,
 With lonely feeling, like the smell
 Of heath on mountains, fill'd my heart.
 To see her seem'd delight's full scope,
 And her kind smile, so clear of care,
 Ev'n then, though darkening all my hope,
 Gilded the cloud of my despair.

2.

She had forgot to bring a book.

I lent one ; blamed the print for old ;
And did not tell her that she took

A Tasso worth its weight in gold.

I hoped she'd lose it ; for my love

Was grown so dainty, high, and nice,
It prized no luxury above

The sense of fruitless sacrifice.

3.

The bell rang, and, with shrieks like death,

Link catching link, the long array,

With ponderous pulse and fiery breath,

Proud of its burthen, swept away ;

And through the lingering crowd I broke,

Sought the hill-side, and thence, heart-sick,

Beheld, far off, the little smoke

Along the landscape kindling quick.

4.

What should I do, where should I go,
Now she was gone, my love ! for mine
She was, whatever here below
Cross'd or usurp'd my right divine.
Life without her was vain and gross,
The glory from the world was gone,
And on the gardens of the Close
As on Sahara shone the sun.
Oppress'd with her departed grace,
My thoughts on ill surmises fed ;
The harmful influence of the place
She went to fill'd my soul with dread.
She, mixing with the people there,
Might come back alter'd, having caught
The foolish, fashionable air
Of knowing all, and feeling nought.
Or, giddy with her beauty's praise,
She'd scorn our simple country life,
Its wholesome nights and tranquil days,
And would not deign to be my wife.

“My wife,” “my wife,” oh, tenderest word !
How oft, as fearful she might hear,
Whispering that name of “wife,” I heard
More than the music of the sphere.

5.

I pass'd the home of my regret.
The clock was chiming in the hall,
And one sad window open yet,
Although the dews began to fall.
Ah, distance shew'd her beauty's scope !
How light of heart and innocent
That loveliness which sicken'd hope
And wore the world for ornament !
How perfectly her life was framed ;
And, thought of in that passionate mood,
How her affecting graces shamed
The vulgar life that was but good !
Ah, none else loved her half enough ;
No, not her sisters nor the Dean !

All tenderness save mine seem'd rough,
 Officious, ignorant, and mean.
I wonder'd, would her bird be fed,
 Her rose-plots water'd, she not by,
Loading my breast with angry dread
 Of light, unlikely injury.
So, fill'd with love and fond remorse,
 I paced the Close, its every part
Endow'd with reliquary force
 To heal and raise from death my heart.
How tranquil and unsecular
 The precinct ! Once, through yonder gate,
I saw her go, and knew from far
 Her noble form and gentle state ;
Her dress had brush'd this wicket ; here
 She turn'd her face, and laugh'd, with looks
Like moonbeams on a wavering mere ;
 This was her stall, these were her books ;
Here had she knelt. Here now I stay'd,
 While Prayers were read ; in grief's despite

Felt grief assuaged ; then homeward stray'd,
Weary beforehand of the night.
The blackbird, in the shadowy wood,
Talk'd by himself, and eastward grew
In heaven the symbol of my mood,
Where one bright star engross'd the blue.

CANTO X.
 Going to Church.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Joyful Wisdom.

WOULD Wisdom for herself be woo'd,
 And wake the foolish from his dream,
 She must be glad as well as good,
 And must not only be, but seem.
 Beauty and joy are hers by right ;
 And, knowing this, I wonder less
 That she's so scorn'd, when falsely dight
 In misery and ugliness.
 What's that which Heav'n to man endears
 And that which eyes no sooner see

Than the heart says, with floods of tears,
 " Ah, that's the thing which I would be !"
Not childhood, full of frown and fret ;
 Not youth, impatient to disown
Those visions high, which to forget
 Were worse than never to have known ;
Not worldlings, in whose fair outside
 Nor courtesy nor justice fails,
Whose virtues are but vices tied,
 Like Samson's foxes, by the tails ;
Not poets : real things are dreams,
 When dreams are as realities,
And boasters of celestial gleams
 Go stumbling aye for want of eyes ;
Not patriots or people's men,
 In whom two worse-match'd evils meet
Than ever sought Adullam's den,
 Base conscience and a high conceit ;
Not new-made saints, their feelings iced,
 Their joy in man and nature gone,
Who sing " O, easy yoke of Christ !"
 But find 'tis hard to get it on ;

Not great men, even when they're good ;

 The good man whom the Lord makes great,
By some disgrace of chance or blood

 He fails not to humiliate ;
Not these : but souls, found here and there,
 Oases in our waste of sin,

Where everything is well and fair,
 And God remits his discipline ;

Whose sweet subdual of the world
 The worldling scarce can recognise,
And ridicule, against it hurl'd,

 Drops with a broken sting and dies ;
Who nobly, if they cannot know

 Whether a 'scutcheon's dubious field
Carries a falcon or a crow,

 Fancy a falcon on the shield ;
Yet, ever careful not to hurt

 God's honour, who creates success,
Their praise of even the best desert

 Is but to have presumed no less ;
And, should their own life plaudits bring,
 They're simply vex'd at heart that such

An easy, yea, delightful thing
Should move the minds of men so much.
They live by law, not like the fool,
But like the bard, who freely sings
In strictest bonds of rhyme and rule,
And finds in them, not bonds, but wings.
Postponing still their private ease
To courtly custom, appetite,
Subjected to observances,
To banquet goes with full delight ;
Nay, continence and gratitude
So cleanse their lives from earth's alloy,
They taste, in nature's common food,
Nothing but spiritual joy.
They shine like Moses in the face,
And teach our hearts, without the rod,
That God's grace is the only grace,
And all grace is the grace of God.

II.

Truth and Love.

SHE whom the sacred Books declare
The Crown and Glory of the man,
Is much too nearly dear my care
For me with sequent thoughts to scan.
In her prized interest yet I prove,
With words that ne'er shall be forgot,
Such perfect friends are truth and love
That neither lives where both are not.
Praise then my Song where'er it comes,
Ladies, whose innocence makes bright
England, the land of courtly homes,
The world's exemplar and delight.

III.

The Devices.

LOVE, kiss'd by Wisdom, wakes twice love,
And Wisdom is, thro' loving, wise.
Let Dove and Snake, and Snake and Dove,
This Wisdom's be, that Love's device.

GOING TO CHURCH.

I.

I WOKE at three ; for I was bid
To breakfast with the Dean at nine,
And thence to Church. My curtain slid,
I found the dawning Sunday fine,
And could not rest, so rose. The air
Was dark and sharp ; the roosted birds
Cheep'd, " Here am I, Sweet ; are you there ?"
On Avon's misty flats the herds
Expected, comfortless, the day,
Which slowly fired the clouds above ;
The cock scream'd, somewhere far away ;
In sleep the matrimonial dove
Was brooding ; no wind waked the wood,
Nor moved the midnight river-damps,
Nor thrill'd the poplar ; quiet stood
The chestnut with its thousand lamps ;

The moon shone yet, but weak and drear,
And seem'd to watch, with bated breath,
The landscape, all made sharp and clear
By stillness, as a face by death.

2.

My prayers for her being done, I took Occasion by the quiet hour
To find and know, by Rule and Book,
The rights of love's beloved power.

3.

Fronting the question without ruth,
Not ignorant that, evermore,
If men will stoop to kiss the Truth,
She lifts them higher than before,
I from above such light required
As now should once for all destroy
The folly which at times desired
A sanction for so great a joy.

4.

Thenceforth, and through that prayer, I trod

A path with no suspicions dim.

I loved her in the name of God,

And for the ray she was of Him ;

I ought to admire much more, not less ;

Her beauty was a godly grace ;

The mystery of loveliness,

Which made an altar of her face,

Was not of the flesh, though that was fair,

But a most pure and living light

Without a name, by which the rare

And virtuous spirit flamed to sight.

If oft, in love, effect lack'd cause

And cause effect, 'twere vain to soar

Reasons to seek for that which was

Reason itself, or something more.

My joy was no idolatry

Upon the ends of the vile earth bent,

For when I loved her most then I
Most yearn'd for more divine content.
That other doubt, which, like a ghost
At all love's banquets haunted me,
Was thus resolved : Him loved I most,
But her I loved most sensibly.
Lastly, my giddiest hope allow'd
No selfish thought, or earthly smirch ;
And forth I went, in peace, and proud
To take my passion into Church ;
Grateful and glad to think that all
Such doubts would seem entirely vain
To her whose nature's lighter fall
Made no divorce of heart from brain.

5.

I found them, with exactest grace
And fresh as Spring, for Spring attired ;
And by the radiance in her face
I saw she felt she was admired ;

And, through the common luck of love,
A moment's fortunate delay,
To fit the little lilac glove,
Gave me her arm ; and I and they,
(They true to this and every hour,
As if attended on by Time),
Went into Church while yet the tower
Was noisy with the finish'd chime.

6.

Her soft voice, singularly heard
Beside me, in the Psalms, withstood
The roar of voices, like a bird
Sole warbling in a windy wood ;
And, when we knelt, she seem'd to be
An angel teaching me to pray ;
And all through the high Liturgy
My spirit rejoiced without allay,
Being for once borne clearly above
All banks and bars of ignorance,

By this bright spring-tide of pure love,
And floated in a free expanse,
Whence it could see from side to side,
The obscurity from every part
Winnow'd away and purified
By the vibrations of my heart.

7.

The Dean's Text, (oft it happens thus,)
Most apt to what my thoughts employ'd,
Was Paul's word to those, infamous,
Of natural affection void.
He preach'd but what the conscience saith
To those blest few who listen well :
" No fruit can come of that man's faith
" Who is to Nature infidel.
" God stands not with Himself at strife :
" His work is first, His Word is next :
" Two sacred tomes, one Book of Life ;
" The comment this, and that the text.

“ Ill worship they who drop the Creed,

“ And take their chance with Jew and Turk ;

“ But not so ill as they who read

“ The Word, and doubt the greater Work.”

CANTO XI.

The Dance.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Daughter of Eve.

THE woman's gentle mood o'erstept

Withers my love, that lightly scans

The rest, and does in her accept

All her own faults, but none of man's.

As man I cannot judge her ill,

Or honour her fair station less,

Who, with a woman's errors, still

Preserves a woman's gentleness;

For thus I think, if one I see

Who disappoints my high desire

“How admirable would she be,
“Could she but know how I admire!”
Or fail she, though from blemish clear,
To charm, I call it my defect;
And so my thought, with reverent fear
To err by doltish disrespect,
Imputes love’s great regard, and says,
“Though unapparent ’tis to me,
“Be sure this Queen some other sways
“With well perceiv’d supremacy.”
Behold the worst! Light from above
On the blank ruin writes “Forbear!
“Her first crime was unguarded love,
“And all the rest was mere despair.”
Discrown’d, dejected, but not lost,
O, sad one, with no more a name
Or place in all the honour’d host
Of maiden and of matron fame,
Grieve on; but, if thou grieve’st right,
’Tis not that these abhor thy state,
Nor would’st thou lower the least the height
Which makes thy casting down so great.

Good is thy lot in its degree ;

For hearts that verily repent

Are burden'd with impunity

And comforted by chastisement.

• Sweet patience sanctify thy woes !

And doubt not but our God is just,

Albeit unscath'd thy traitor goes,

And thou art stricken to the dust.

That penalty's the best to bear

Which follows soonest on the sin ;

And guilt's a game where losers fare

Better than those who seem to win.

II.

Aurea Dicta,

'Tis truth, (although this truth's a star
Too deep-enski'd for all to see),
As poets of grammar, lovers are
The well-heads of morality.

Child, would you shun the vulgar doom,
In love disgust, in death despair ?
Know, death must come and love must come,
And so for each your soul prepare.

Who pleasure follows pleasure slays ;
God's wrath upon himself he wreaks ;
But all delights rejoice his days
Who takes with thanks, and never seeks.

The wrong is made and measured by
The right's inverted dignity.
Change love to shame, as love is high
So low in hell your bed shall be.

How easy to keep free from sin !
How hard that freedom to recall !
For dreadful truth it is that men
Forget the heavens from which they fall.

Lest sacred love your soul ensnare,
With pious fancy still infer
"How loving and how lovely fair
"Must He be who has fashion'd her !"

Become whatever good you see,
Nor sigh if, forthwith, fades from view
The grace of which you may not be
The subject and spectator too.

Love's perfect blossom only blows
Where noble manners veil defect.
Angels may be familiar ; those
Who err each other must respect.

Love blabb'd of is a great decline ;
A careless word unsanctions sense ;
But he who casts Heaven's truth to swine
Consummates all incontinence.

Not to unveil before the gaze
Of an imperfect sympathy
In aught we are, is the sweet praise
And the main sum of modesty.

THE DANCE.

I.

- " My memory of heaven awakes !
 " She's not of the earth, although her light,
 " As lantern'd by her body, makes
 " A piece of it past bearing bright.
 " So innocently proud and fair
 " She is, that Wisdom sings for glee
 " And Folly dies, breathing one air
 " With such a bright-cheek'd chastity ;
 " And though her charms are a strong law
 " Compelling all men to admire,
 " They go so clad with lovely awe
 " None but the noble dares desire.
 " He who would seek to make her his
 " Will comprehend that souls of grace
 " Own sweet repulsion, and that 'tis
 " The quality of their embrace

“To be like the majestic reach
“Of coupled suns, that, from afar,
“Mingle their mutual spheres, while each
“Circles the twin obsequious star ;
“And in the warmth of hand to hand,
“Of heart to heart, he’ll vow to note
“And reverently understand
“How the two spirits shine remote ;
“And ne’er to numb fine honour’s nerve,
“Nor let sweet awe in passion melt,
“Nor fail by courtesies to observe
“The space which makes attraction felt ;
“Nor cease to guard like life the sense
“Which tells him that the embrace of love
“Is o’er a gulf of difference
“Love cannot sound, nor death remove.”

2.

This learn’d I, watching where she danced,
Native to melody and light,
And now and then toward me glanced,
Pleased, as I hoped, to please my sight.

3.

Ah, love to speak was impotent,
Till music did a tongue confer,
And I ne'er knew what music meant,
Until I danced to it with her.
Too proud of the sustaining power
Of my, till then, unblemish'd joy,
My passion, for reproof, that hour
Tasted mortality's alloy,
And bore me down an eddy gulf ;
I wish'd the world might run to wreck,
So I but once might fling myself
Obliviously about her neck.
I press'd her hand, by will or chance
I know not, but I saw the rays
Withdrawn, which did till then enhance
Her fairness with its thanks for praise.
I knew my spirit's vague offence
Was patent to the dreaming eye
And heavenly tact of innocence,
And did for fear my fear defy,

And ask'd her for the next dance. "Yes,"

"No" had not fall'n with half the force.

She was fulfill'd with gentleness,

And I with measureless remorse ;

And, ere I slept, on bended knee

I own'd myself, with many a tear,

Unseasonable, disorderly,

And a deranger of love's sphere ;

Gave thanks that, when we stumble and fall,

We hurt ourselves, and not the truth,

And, rising, found its brightness all

The brighter through the tears of ruth.

4-

Nor was my hope that night made less,

Though order'd, humbled, and reproved ;

Her farewell did her heart express

As much, but not with anger, moved.

My trouble had my soul betray'd ;

And, in the night of my despair,

My love, a flower of noon afraid,
Divulged its fulness unaware.
I saw she saw ; and, O sweet Heaven,
Could my glad mind have credited
That influence had to me been given
To affect her so, I should have said
That, though she from herself conceal'd
Love's felt delight and fancied harm,
They made her face the jousting field
Of joy and beautiful alarm.

CANTO XII.

The Abdication.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Chace.

SHE wearies with an ill unknown ;

In sleep she sobs and seems to float,
A water-lily, all alone

Within a lonely castle-moat ;
And as the full-moon, spectral, lies

Within the crescent's gleaming arms,
The present shows her heedless eyes

A future dim with vague alarms.
She sees, and yet she scarcely sees ;

For, life-in-life not yet begun,

Too many are its mysteries
For thought to fix on any one.
She's told that maidens are by youths
Extremely honour'd and desired ;
And sighs, " If those sweet tales be truths,
" What bliss to be so much admired !"
The suitors come ; she sees them grieve ;
Her coldness fills them with despair ;
She'd pity if she could believe ;
She's sorry that she cannot care.
But who now meets her on her way ?
Comes he as enemy, or friend,
Or both ? Her bosom seems to say
He cannot pass, and there an end.
Whom does he love ? Does he confer
His heart on worth that answers his ?
Or is he come to worship her ?
She fears, she hopes, she thinks he is !
Advancing stepless, quick, and still,
As in the grass a serpent glides,
He fascinates her fluttering will,
Then terrifies with dreadful strides.

At first, there's nothing to resist ;
He fights with all the forms of peace ;
He comes about her like a mist,
With subtle, swift, unseen increase ;
And then, unlook'd for, strikes amain
Some stroke that frightens her to death,
And grows all harmlessness again,
Ere she can cry, or get her breath.
At times she stops, and stands at bay ;
But he, in all more strong than she,
Subdues her with his pale dismay,
Or more admired audacity.
She plans some final, fatal blow,
But, when she means with frowns to kill,
He looks as if he loved her so,
She smiles to him against her will.
How sweetly he implies her praise !
His tender talk, his gentle tone,
The manly worship in his gaze,
They nearly make her heart his own.
With what an air he speaks her name !
His manner always recollects

Her sex, and still the woman's claim
Is taught its scope by his respects.
Her charms, perceived to prosper first
In his beloved advertencies,
When in her glass they are rehearsed,
Prove his most powerful allies.
Ah, whither shall a maiden flee,
When a bold youth so swift pursues,
And siege of tenderest courtesy,
With hope perseverant, still renews !
Why fly so fast ? Her flatter'd breast
Thanks him who finds her fair and good ;
She loves her fears ; veil'd joys arrest
The foolish terrors of her blood ;
By secret, sweet degrees, her heart,
Vanquish'd, takes warmth from his desire ;
She makes it more, with hidden art,
And fuels love's late dreaded fire.
The generous credit he accords
To all the signs of good in her
Redeems itself ; his praiseful words
The virtues they impute confer.

Her heart is thrice as rich in bliss,
 She's three times gentler than before ;
He gains a right to call her his,
 Now she through him is so much more !
'Tis heaven where'er she turns her head ;
 'Tis music when she talks ; 'tis air
On which, elate, she seems to tread,
 The convert of a gladder sphere !
Ah, might he, when by doubts aggrieved,
 Behold his tokens next her breast,
At all his words and sighs perceived
 Against its glad upheaval press'd !
But still she flies. Should she be won,
 It must not be believed or thought
She yields ; she's chased to death, undone,
 Surprised, and violently caught.

II.

Denied.

THE storm-cloud, whose portentous shade
Fumes from a core of smother'd fire,
His livery is whose worship'd maid
Denies herself to his desire.
Ah, grief that almost crushes life,
To lie upon his lonely bed,
And fancy her another's wife !
His brain is flame, his heart is lead.
Sinking at last, by nature's course,
Cloak'd round with sleep from his despair,
He only sleeps to gather force
That goes to his exhausted care.
He wakes renew'd for all the smart.
His only Love, and she is wed !
His fondness comes about his heart,
As milk comes, when the babe is dead.

The wretch, whom she found fit for scorn,
His own allegiant thoughts despise ;
And far into the shining morn
Lazy with misery he lies.

III.

The Churl.

THIS marks the Churl : when spousals crown

His selfish hope, he finds the grace,

Which sweet love has for even the clown,

Was not in the woman, but the chace.

THE ABDICATION.

I.

FROM little signs, like little stars,
Whose faint impression on the sense
The very looking straight at mars,
Or only seen by confluence ;
From instinct of a mutual thought,
Whence sanctity of manners flow'd ;
From chance unconscious, and from what
Concealment, overconscious, show'd ;
Her hand's less weight upon my arm,
Her lowlier mien ; that match'd with this ;
I found, and felt with strange alarm,
I stood committed to my bliss.

2.

I grew assur'd, before I ask'd,
That she'd be mine without reserve,

And in her unclaim'd graces bask'd,
At leisure, till the time should serve,
With just enough of dread to thrill
The hope, and make it trebly dear ;
Thus loth to speak the word to kill
Either the hope or happy fear.

3.

Till once, through lanes returning late,
Her laughing sisters lagg'd behind ;
And, ere we reach'd her father's gate,
We paused with one presentient mind ;
And, in the dim and perfumed mist,
Their coming stay'd, who, friends to me,
And very women, loved to assist
Love's timid opportunity.

4.

Twice rose, twice died my trembling word ;
The faint and frail Cathedral chimes

Spoke time in music, and we heard
The chafers rustling in the limes.
Her dress, that touch'd me where I stood,
The warmth of her confided arm,
Her bosom's gentle neighbourhood,
Her pleasure in her power to charm ;
Her look, her love, her form, her touch,
The least seem'd most by blissful turn,
Blissful but that it pleased too much,
And taught the wayward soul to yearn.
It was as if a harp with wires
Was traversed by the breath I drew ;
And, oh, sweet meeting of desires,
She, answering, own'd that she loved too.

5.

Honorina was to be my bride !
The hopeless heights of hope were scaled ;
The summit won, I paused and sigh'd,
As if success itself had fail'd.

It seem'd as if my lips approach'd
To touch at Tantalus' reward,
And rashly on Eden life encroach'd,
Half-blinded by the flaming sword.
The whole world's wealthiest and its best,
So fiercely sought, appear'd, when found,
Poor in its need to be possess'd,
Poor from its very want of bound.
By that consenting scared and shock'd,
Such change came o'er her mien and mood
That I felt startled and half-mock'd,
As winning what I had not woo'd.
My queen was crouching at my side,
By love unscepter'd and brought low,
Her awful garb of maiden pride
All melted into tears like snow ;
The mistress of my reverent thought,
Whose praise was all I ask'd of fame,
In my close-watch'd approval sought
Protection as from danger and blame ;

Her soul, which late I loved to invest
With pity for my poor desert,
Buried its face within my breast,
Like a pet fawn by hunters hurt.

6.

Sweet are the flatteries of love ;
They neither would nor do deceive,
Albeit they lift our hearts above
All flatteries which our hearts believe !
But this of making me her lord
Appear'd such passionate excess,
I almost wish'd her state restored,
I almost wish'd she loved me less.
I felt abash'd, and look'd aside
From honour I might not refuse,
Until I saw my shame was pride,
Since love in love discerns all dues,

And never of meaner payment speaks,
But loves to love for love's sole sake,
And in its object only seeks
That worth which only love can wake.

7.

Of this good truth intelligent,
I buried soon, in the deep sea
Of a most near and dear content,
All pride and all humility;
So she beside me sate her down,
Excused from dignity and care,
And I submitted to the crown
No choice was left me but to wear.

THE EPILOGUE.

I.

HIS "Book the First" so finish'd, Vaughan,
 Elated with his partner's praise,
 March'd laughing up and down the lawn,
 With brows that seem'd to feel the bays.
 She thought the Critics must admire
 What seemed to her such lovely rhymes !
 "Nay," answer'd he, with rising ire,
 Foreboding "Blackwood" and "The Times,"
 "I'm not a Chartist or a lord ;
 "To strut on stilts is not my use ;
 "And my vain claim to their good word
 "Is nothing but a noble Muse."
 Then, boasting Songs to come, he said
 The strains with which the next began
 Pass'd all he'd written yet ; and read
 The opening verses. Thus they ran :

2.

" 'Tis so beyond conceiving sweet
 " To love and be beloved in turn,
" That lovers talk, whene'er they meet,
 " Only their joy to teach and learn.
" They tell how dearly they adore ;
 " Will not believe they are believed ;
" And tell the tidings o'er and o'er,
 " And kiss to make their words conceived ;
" And then take hands with sighs' soft speech,
 " And tell the same sweet tale again ;
" The same sweet mystery learn and teach ;
 " And kiss and kiss to make it plain.
" Beloved tautologies of love !
 " Which ever, ever both repeat ;
" Which never, never seem to prove
 " The point to either's fond conceit ;
" Because, indeed,—"

3.

But here his Wife,
All praise till now, objected : " This,"

Said she, "you did not take from life ;
 "You should not make the lady kiss."
The fault confess'd with light demur,
 Those lines he promised to remove,
Fixing in colloquy with her,
 As canons of their Court of Love :
" Like and like chime, same and same jar ;
 " If she to womanhood is true,
" To manhood he, their feelings are
 " In difference match'd, like red and blue."

4.

Then, pondering what the difference was,
 He ask'd her thrice, would she be pleased
To help his Muse ; but she grew cross,
 And begg'd that she might not be teased.
" Well, till you tell me freely why
 " You love me, you shall have no kiss ;
" And so, till dinner-time, good-bye !"
 Said he, used to prevail by this.

She : "Dearest, do not leave me so !"

He : "Give the reasons, one and all."

She, laughing : "Love, I do not know,

"Unless it is that you're so tall."

On tiptoe, then, she stood to touch

His lips with her's, but three times miss'd,

And pouted. "Nay, then, tell how much ?"

"How can I, if you'll not be kiss'd !"

Baffled, he thought the difference o'er ;

Soon smiled, and said he knew it well ;

But, good World, Love shows Poets more

Than you deserve that they should tell.

THE ANGEL IN THE HOUSE.

PART I.

BOOK II.—THE ESPOUSALS.

"I came out as a brook from a river, and as a conduit into a garden. I said, I will water my best garden, and will water abundantly my garden-bed: and lo, my brook became a river, and my river became a sea."—ECCLES. XXIV. 30, 31.

THE PROLOGUE.

I.

HER sons pursue the butterflies,
Her baby daughter mocks the doves
With throbbing coo ; in his fond eyes
She's Venus with her little Loves ;
Her footfall dignifies the earth,
Her form's the native-land of grace,
And, lo, his coming lights with mirth
Its court and capital her face !
Of such a lady proud's the lord,
And that her flatter'd bosom knows ;
She takes his arm without a word,
In lanes of laurel and of rose.
Ten years to-day has she been his.
He but begins to understand,

He says, the dignity and bliss
She gave him when she gave her hand.
Would she believe, should he aver,
To press that hand, though part so small
Of the honour he enjoys in her,
Seems now much more than when 'twas all ?
She, answering, says, he disenchants
The past, though that was perfect ; he
Rejoins, the present nothing wants
But briefness to be ecstasy.
He lauds her charms ; her beauty's glow
Wins from the spoiler Time new rays ;
Bright looks reply, approving so
Beauty's elixir vitæ, praise.
Upon a beech he bids her mark
Where, ten years since, he carved her name ;
It grows there with the growing bark,
And in his heart it grows the same.
For that her soft arm presses his
Close to her fond, maternal breast ;

He tells her, each fresh favour is
The effectual sum of all the rest !
And, whilst the cushat, mocking, coo'd,
They blest the days that they'd been wed
At cost of those in which he woo'd,
Till everything was three times said ;
And words were growing vain, when Briggs,
Factotum, Footman, Butler, Groom,
Who made the cyder, fed the pigs,
Preserved the rabbits, drove the brougham,
And help'd, at need, to mow the lawns,
Get in the math, and thatch the ricks,
Here brought the Post down, Mrs. Vaughan's
Sole rival, Venus Meretrix.

2.

Joy to the lovely, lawful dame !
'Twas, scarcely looked at, push'd aside,
Though news-puff'd like the cheeks of Fame.
News, County business, all must bide ;

For now the longed-for "Second Book,"
Till this tenth festival kept close,
Was thus commenced, while o'er them shook
The laurel married with the rose.

3.

"The pulse of War, whose bloody heats
"Sane purposes insanelly work,
"Now with fraternal frenzy beats,
"And binds the Christian to the Turk,
"And shrieking fives"—

4.

But, with a roar,
In rush'd the Loves ; the tallest roll'd
A hedgehog from his pinafore,
Which saved his fingers ; Baby, bold,
Touch'd it, and stared, and screamed for life,
And stretch'd her hand for Vaughan to kiss,

Who hugg'd his Pet, and ask'd his wife,
 "Is this for love, or love for this?"
But she turn'd pale, for, lo, the beast
 Found stock-still in the rabbit-trap,
And feigning so to be deceased,
 And laid by Frank upon her lap,
Unglobed himself, and show'd his snout,
 And fell, scatt'ring the Loves amain,
With shriek, with laughter, and with shout ;
 And peace at last restored again,
The Bard, who this untimely hitch
 Bore with a calm magnanimous,
(The hedgehog kick'd into a ditch,
 And Venus sooth'd,) proceeded thus :

CANTO I.

Accepted.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Song of Songs.

THE pulse of war, whose bloody heats
 Sane purposes insanely work,
 Now with fraternal frenzy beats,
 And binds the Christian to the Turk,
 And shrieking fifes and braggart flags,
 Through quiet England, teach our breath
 The courage corporate that drags
 The coward to heroic death.
 Too late for song ! Who henceforth sings,
 Must fledge his heavenly flight with more

Song-worthy and heroic things
Than hasty, home-destroying war.
While might and right are not agreed,
And battle thus is yet to wage,
So long let laurels be the meed
Of soldier as of poet sage ;
But men await the Tale of Love,
And weary of the Tale of Troy ;
Lift me, O Muse, myself above,
To win the honour and the joy !

II.

The Kites.

I saw three Cupids, (so I dream'd),
Who made three kites, on which were drawn,
In letters that like roses gleam'd,
"Plato," "Anacreon," and "Vaughan."
The boy who held by Plato tried
His airy venture first ; all sail,
It heav'nward rush'd till scarce descried,
Then pitch'd and dropp'd, for want of tail.
Anacreon's Love, with shouts of mirth
That pride of spirit thus should fall,
To his kite link'd a lump of earth,
And, lo, it would not soar at all.
Last, my disciple freighted his
With a long streamer made of flowers,
The children of the sod, and this
Rose in the sun and flew for hours.

III.

Orpheus.

THE music of the Sirens found

Ulysses weak, though cords were strong ;
But happier Orpheus stood unbound,
And shamed it with a sweeter song.

His mode be mine. Of Heav'n I ask,
May I, with heart-persuading might,
Pursue the Poet's sacred task

Of superseding faith by sight,
Till ev'n the witless Gadarene,

Preferring Christ to swine, shall know
That life is sweetest when it's clean.

To prouder folly let me show
Earth by divine light made divine ;

And let the saints, who hear my word,
Say, " Lo, the clouds begin to shine
" About the coming of the Lord !"

IV.

Nearest the Dearest.

TILL Eve was brought to Adam, he
A solitary desert trod,
Though in the great society
Of nature, angels, and of God.
If one slight column counterweighs
The ocean, 'tis the Maker's law,
Who deems obedience better praise
Than sacrifice of erring awe.

V.

Star and Planet.

WHAT seems to us for us is true.

The planet has no proper light,
And yet to subtlest mortal view
The primal star is not so bright.

ACCEPTED.

I.

WHAT fortune did my heart foretell ?
 What shook my spirit, as I woke,
 Like the vibration of a bell
 Of which I had not heard the stroke ?
 Was it some happy vision shut
 From memory by the sun's fresh ray ?
 Was it that linnet's song ; or but
 A natural gratitude for day ?
 Or the mere joy the senses weave,
 A wayward ecstasy of life ?
 Then I remember'd, yester-eve
 I won Honoria for my wife.

2.

Forth riding, while as yet the day
 Was dewy, watching Sarum Spire,

Still beckoning me along my way,
And growing every minute higher,
I reach'd the Dean's. One blind was down,
Though nine then struck. My bride to be!
And had she rested ill, my own,
With thinking (oh, my heart!) of me?
I paced the streets; a pistol chose,
To guard my now important life
When riding late from Sarum Close;
At noon return'd. Good Mrs. Fife,
To my, "The Dean, is he at home?"
Said, "No, Sir; but Miss Honor is;"
And straight, not asking if I'd come,
Announced me, "Mr. Felix, Miss,"
To Mildred, in the Study. There
We talk'd, she working. We agreed
The day was fine; the Fancy-Fair
Successful; "Did I ever read
"De Genlis?" "Never." "Do! She heard
"I was engaged." "To whom?" "Miss Fry.

"Was it the fact?" "No!" "On my word?"

"What scandal people talk'd!" "Would I

"Hold out this skein of silk." So pass'd

I knew not how much time away.

"How were her sisters?" "Well." At last

I summon'd heart enough to say,

"I hoped to have seen Miss Churchill too."

"Miss Churchill, Felix! What is this?"

"I said, and now I find it's true,

"Last night you quarrell'd! Here she is."

3.

She enter'd, like a morning rose

Ruffled with rain, and made me blush;

Her crown once more was on her brows;

And, with a faint, indignant flush,

And fainter smile, she gave her hand,

But not her eyes, then sate apart,

As if to make me understand

The honour of her vanquish'd heart.

But I drew humbly to her side ;
And she, well pleased, perceiving me
Subdued again before the pride
Of her unconquer'd majesty,
Once and for all put it away ;
The faint flush pass'd ; and, thereupon,
Her loveliness, which rather lay
In light than colour, smiled and shone,
Till sick was all my soul with bliss ;
Or was it with remorse and ire
That grace so worshipful as this
Should not have set its heaven higher ?

CANTO II.

The Course of True Love.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Changed Allegiance.

WATCH how a bird, that captived sings,
 The cage set open, first looks out,
 Yet fears the freedom of his wings,
 And now withdraws, and flits about,
 And now looks forth again ; until,
 Grown bold, he perches here and there,
 And now attains the window-sill,
 And now entrusts himself to air.
 The maiden so, from love's free sky
 In chaste and prudent counsels caged,

But longing to be loosen'd by
Her suitor's faith declared and gaged,
When blest with that release desired,
First doubts if truly she is free,
Then pauses, restlessly retired,
Alarm'd at too much liberty;
But soon, remembering all her debt
To plighted passion, gets by rote
Her duty ; says, " I love him !" yet
The thought half chokes her in her throat ;
And, like that fatal " I am thine,"
Comes with alternate gush and check
And joltings of the heart, as wine
Pour'd from a flask of narrow neck.
Is he indeed her choice ? She fears
Her Yes was rashly said, and shame,
Remorse, and ineffectual tears
Revolt from his conceded claim.
Oh, treason ! So, with desperate nerve,
She cries, " I am in love, am his !"

Lets run the cables of reserve,
And floats into a sea of bliss,
And laughs to think of her alarm,
Avows she was in love before,
Though his avowal was the charm
Which open'd to her own the door.
She loves him for his mastering air,
Whence, Parthian-like, she slaying flies ;
His flattering look, which seems to wear
Her loveliness in manly eyes ;
His smile, which, by reverse, portends
An awful wrath, should reason stir ;
(How fortunate it is they're friends,
And he will ne'er be wroth with her !)
His power to do or guard from harm ;
If he but chose to use it half,
And catch her up in one strong arm,
What could she do but weep, or laugh !
His words, which still instruct, but so
That this applause seems still implied,

“How wise in all she ought to know,
“How ignorant of all beside !”
His skilful suit, which leaves her free,
Gives nothing for the world to name,
And keeps her conscience safe, while he,
With half the bliss, takes all the blame ;
His clear repute with great and small ;
The jealousy his choice will stir ;
But, ten times more than ten times all,
She loves him for his love of her.
How happy 'tis that he can see
In her that utter loveliness
Which she, for his sake, longs to be !
At times, she cannot but confess
Her other friends are somewhat blind ;
Her parents' years excuse neglect,
But all the rest are scarcely kind,
And brothers grossly want respect ;
And oft she views what he admires
Within her glass, and sight of this

Makes all the sum of her desires
To be devotion unto his.
But still, at first, whatever's done,
A touch, her arm press'd lightly, she
Stands dizzied, shock'd, and flush'd, like one
Set sudden neck-deep in the sea ;
And, though her bond for endless time
To his good pleasure gives her o'er,
The slightest favour seems a crime,
Because it makes her love him more.
But that she ne'er will let him know ;
For what were love should reverence cease ?
A thought which makes her reason so
Inscrutable, it seems caprice.
With her, as with a desperate town,
Too weak to stand, too proud to treat,
The conqueror, though the walls are down,
Has still to capture street by street ;
But after that, habitual faith,
Divorced from self, where late 'twas due,

Walks nobly in its novel path,
And she's to changed allegiance true ;
And, prizing what she can't prevent,
(Right wisdom, often misdeem'd whim,)
Her will's indomitably bent
On mere submissiveness to him ;
To him she'll cleave, for him forsake
Father's and mother's fond command !
He is her lord, for he can take
Hold of her faint heart with his hand.

II.

Beauty.

"BEAUTY deludes." O, shaft well shot,
To strike the mark's true opposite !
That ugly good is scorn'd proves not
'Tis beauty lies, but lack of it.
By Heaven's law the Jew might take
A slave to wife, if she was fair ;
So strong a plea does beauty make
That, where 'tis seen, discretion's there.
If, by a monstrous chance, we learn
That this illustrious vaunt's a lie,
Our minds, by which the eyes discern,
See hideous contrariety,
And laugh at Nature's wanton mood,
Which, thus a swinish thing to flout,
Though haply in its gross way good,
Hangs such a jewel in its snout.

III.

Lais and Lucretia.

DID first his beauty wake her sighs ?
That's Lais ! Thus Lucretia's known :
The beauty in her Lover's eyes
Was admiration of her own.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.

I.

OH, beating heart of sweet alarm,
Which stays the lover's step when near
His mistress and her awful charm
Of grace and innocence sincere !
I held the half-shut door, and heard
The voice of my betrothed wife,
Who sang my verses, every word
By music taught its latent life ;
With interludes of well-touch'd notes,
That flash'd, surprising and serene,
As meteor after meteor floats
The soft, autumnal stars between.
There was a passion in her tone,
A tremor when she touch'd the keys,
Which told me she was there alone,
And uttering all her soul at ease.

I enter'd ; for I did not choose
To learn how in her heart I throve,
By chance or stealth ; beyond their use,
Her large eyes flatter'd me with love.

2.

" Is anything amiss to-day ?
Would, Darling, we were safely wed !"—
" Felix, Aunt Maude is come to stay."—
" The Tory ! Tell me what she said."
With true love's treacherous confidence,
And ire, at last to laughter won,
She told her words, and mark'd their sense,
By action, as her Aunt had done.

3.

" ' You, with your looks and catching air,
" ' To think of Vaughan ! You fool ! You know,
" ' You might, with ordinary care,
" ' Ev'n yet be Lady Clitheroe.

“ ‘ You’re sure he’ll do great things some day !

“ ‘ Nonsense, he wont ; he’s dress’d too well.

“ ‘ Dines with the Sterling Club, they say ;

“ ‘ Not commonly respectable !

“ ‘ Half Puritan, half Cavalier !

“ ‘ His curly hair I think’s a wig ;

“ ‘ And, for his fortune, why, my Dear,

“ ‘ Rich Aunts and Uncles never die ;

“ ‘ And what you bring wont do for dress ;

“ ‘ And so you’ll live on ‘ Bye-and-bye,’

“ ‘ With oaten-cake and water-cress !’

4.

“ I cried, but did not let her see.

“ At last she softened her dispraise,

“ On hearing you had bought for me

“ A carriage and a pair of bays.

“ But here she comes ! You take her in

“ To dinner. I impose this task :

“ Make her approve my love ; and win

“ What thanks from me you choose to ask !”

5.

We loathed the "Revolution Bill,"

No Pitts or Burkes had been since then !

The mob had now their idiot will.

Hard times were ours for gentlemen !

We quite agreed about the Whigs,

And almost wish'd the Bourbons back,

And thought Young Englanders were prigs ;

Then she, with unexpected tack,

" My niece has told you every word

" I said of you ! What may I mean ?

" Of course she has ; but you've not heard

" How I abused you to the Dean ;—

" Yes, I'll take wine ;—he's mad, like her ;

" And she will have you : there it ends !

" And, now I've done my duty, Sir,

" And you've shown common-sense, we're friends !"

6.

" Go, Child, and see him out yourself,"

The Dean said, after tea, " and shew

"The place, upon that upper shelf,
"Where Tasso stands, lent long ago."

7.

A rose in ruin, from her breast,
Fell, as I took a fond adieu.
"These rose-leaves to my heart be press'd,
"Honor, while it aches for you!"
"You must go now, Love!" "See, the air
"Is thick with starlight!" "Let me tie
"This scarf on. Oh, your Tasso! There!
"I'm coming, Aunt!" "Sweet, Sweet!" "Good-bye!"
"Ah, Love, to me 'tis death to part,
"Yet you, my sever'd life, smile on!"
"These 'Good-nights,' Felix, break my heart;
"I'm only gay till you are gone!"
With love's bright arrows from her eyes,
And balm on her permissive lips,
She pass'd, and night was a surprise,
As when the sun at Quito dips.
Her beauties were like sunlit snows,
Flush'd but not warm'd with my desire.

O, how I loved her ! Fiercely glows

In the pure air of frost the fire.

“ Who for a year is sure of fate !”

I thought, dishearten'd, as I went,

Wroth with the Dean, who bade me wait,

And vex'd with her, who seem'd content.

“ Nay, could eternal life afford

“ That tyranny should thus deduct

“ From this fair land, which calls me lord,

“ A year of the sweet usufruct ?”

It might not and it should not be !

I'd go back now, and he must own,

At once, my love's compulsive plea.

I turn'd, I found the Dean alone.

“ Nonsense, my friend ; go back to bed !

“ It's half-past twelve !” “ July, then, Sir ?”

“ Well, come to-morrow,” at last he said,

“ And you may talk of it with her.”

A light gleam'd, as I pass'd the stair.

A satin foot, a flash of dress,

And a sweet voice ! “ Is Felix there ?”

“ July, Love !” “ Says Papa so ?” “ Yes !”

CANTO III.

The County Ball.

 PRELUDES.

I.

Love Ceremonious.

KEEP your undrest, familiar style
 For strangers, but respect your friend,
 Her most, whose matrimonial smile
 Is and asks honour without end.
 'Tis found, and needs it must so be,
 That life from love's allegiance flags,
 When love forgets his majesty
 In sloth's uncereemonious rags.
 Let love make home a gracious Court ;
 There let the world's rude, hasty ways

Be fashion'd to a loftier port,
And learn to bow and stand at gaze ;
And let the sweet, respective sphere
Of personal worship there obtain
Circumference for moving clear,
None treading on another's train.
This makes that pleasures do not cloy,
And dignifies our mortal strife
With calmness and considerate joy,
Befitting our immortal life.

II.

The Rainbow.

A STATELY rainbow came and stood,
When I was young, in High-Hurst Park ;
Its bright feet lit the hill and wood
Beyond, and cloud and sward were dark ;
And I, who thought the splendour ours
Because the place was, t'wards it flew,
And there, amidst the glittering showers,
Gazed vainly for the glorious view.
With whatsoever's lovely, know
It is not ours ; stand off to see ;
Or beauty's apparition so
Puts on invisibility.

III.

A Paradox.

To tryst Love blindfold goes, for fear
He should not see, and eyeless night
He chooses still for breathing near
Beauty, that lives but in the sight.

THE COUNTY BALL.

I.

WELL, Heaven be thank'd my first-love fail'd,
 As, Heaven be thank'd, our first-loves do !
 Thought I, when Fanny past me sail'd,
 Loved once, for what I never knew,
 Unless for colouring in her talk,
 When cheeks and merry mouth would show
 Three roses on a single stalk,
 The middle wanting room to blow,
 And forward ways that charm'd the boy
 Whose love-sick mind, misreading fate,
 Scarce hoped that any Queen of Joy
 Could ever stoop to be his mate.

2.

But there danced she, who from the leaven
 Of ill preserved my heart and wit

All unawares, for she was heaven,
Others at best but fit for it.
One of those lovely things she was
In whose least action there can be Nothing so transient but it has
An air of immortality.
I mark'd her step, with peace elate,
Her brow more beautiful than morn,
Her sometime look of girlish state
Which sweetly waived its right to scorn ;
The giddy crowd, she grave the while,
Although, as 'twere beyond her will,
Around her mouth the baby smile
That she was born with linger'd still.
Her ball-dress seem'd a breathing mist,
From the fair form exhaled and shed,
Raised in the dance with arm and wrist
All warmth and light, unbraceleted.
Her motion, feeling 'twas beloved,
The pensive soul of tune express'd,
And, oh, what perfume, as she moved,
Came from the flowers in her breast !

How sweet a tongue the music had !

“ Beautiful Girl,” it seem’d to say,

“ Though all the world were vile and sad,

“ Dance on ; let innocence be gay.”

Ah, none but I discern’d her looks,

When in the throng she pass’d me by,

For love is like a ghost, and brooks

Only the chosen seer’s eye ;

And who but she could e’er devine

The halo and the happy trance,

When her fair arm reposed on mine,

In all the pauses of the dance !

If either for all else but one

Was blinder than the mole that delves,

Dark-lanterns for all else, we shone

But to each other and ourselves.

3.

Whilst so her beauty fed my sight,

And whilst I lived in what she said,

Accordant airs, like all delight

Most sweet when noted least, were play’d ;

And was it like the Pharisee
If I in secret bow'd my face
With joyful thanks that I should be,
Not as were many, but with grace,
And fortune of well-nurtured youth,
And days no sordid pains defile,
And thoughts accustom'd to the truth,
Made capable of her fair smile?

4.

Charles Barton follow'd down the stair,
To talk with me about the Ball,
And laugh at all the people there.
The Churchills chiefly stirr'd his gall :
"My smart things, Vaughan you know, amuse
"The girls ; but they're not like the rest ;
"They make one mind one's p's and q's,
"And smile at me, and not my jest.
"Give me your brisk and light-built Blondes.
"That tall one's like as like can be

"To those slow Kriemhilds and Isondes

"You storm'd about at Trinity.

"What priggish tastes you had when young !

"Mulier formosa, Vaughan you know :

"And, when one sees these charmers long,

"By Jove we find the fins will show !"—

Did he not waltz with Fanny Fry ?—

"Ah, there's a trump, now ; worth a pack

"Of stupid Kriemhilds. I'd give cry,

"Only they say you hunt that track."

"They err ! Good-night ! Here lies my course,

"Through Wilton." Silence blest my ears,

And, weak at heart with vague remorse,

A passing poignancy of tears

Attack'd mine eyes. By pale and park

I rode, and ever seem'd to see,

In the transparent, starry dark,

That splendid brow of chastity,

That soft and yet subduing light,

At which, as at the sudden moon,

I held my breath, and thought "how bright !"

That guileless beauty in its noon,

Compelling tribute of desires

Ardent as day when Sirius reigns,

Pure as the permeating fires

That smoulder in the opal's veins.

CANTO IV.

Lobe in Idleness.

PRELUDES.

I.

Honour and Desert.

O QUEEN, awake to thy renown,
 Require what 'tis our wealth to give,
 And comprehend and wear the crown
 Of thy despised prerogative !
 I who in manhood's name at length
 With glad songs come to abdicate
 The gross regality of strength,
 Must yet in this thy praise abate,
 That through thine erring humbleness
 And disregard of thy degree,

Mainly, has man been so much less
Than fits his fellowship with thee.
High thoughts had shaped the foolish brow,
The coward had grasp'd the hero's sword,
The vilest had been great, hadst thou,
Just to thyself, been worth's reward.
But lofty honours undersold
Seller and buyer both disgrace ;
And favour that makes folly bold
Puts out the light in virtue's face.

II.

Love and Honour.

WHAT man with baseness so content,
Or sick with false conceit of right,
As not to know that the element
And inmost warmth of love's delight
Is honour? Who'd not rather kiss
A duchess than a milkmaid, prank
The two in equal grace, which is
Precedent Nature's obvious rank?
Much rather, then, a woman deck'd
With saintly honours, chaste and good,
Whose thoughts celestial things affect,
Whose eyes express her heavenly mood!
Those lesser vaunts are dimm'd or lost
Which plume her name or paint her lip,
Extinct in the far brighter boast
Of her angelic fellowship.

III.

Valour misdirected.

"I'LL hunt for dangers North and South,

"To prove my love, which sloth maligns !"

What seems to say her rosy mouth ?

"I'm not convinced by proofs but signs."

LOVE IN IDLENESS.

I.

WHAT should I do ? In such a wife
 Fortune had lavish'd all her store,
 And nothing now seem'd left for life
 But to deserve her more and more.
 To this I vow'd my life's whole scope ;
 And Love said, "I forewarn you now,
 "The maiden will fulfil your hope
 "Only as you fulfil your vow."

2.

A promised service, (task for days,)
 Was done this morning while she slept
 With that full heart which thinks no praise
 Of vows which are not more than kept ;

But loftier work did love impose,
And studious hours. Alas, for these,
While she from all my thoughts arose
Like Venus from the restless seas !

3.

I conn'd a scheme, with mind elate :
My Uncle's land would fall to me,
My skill was much in school debate,
My friends were strong in Salisbury ;
A place in Parliament once gain'd,
Thro' saps first labour'd out of sight,
Far loftier peaks were then attain'd
With easy leaps from height to height ;
And that o'erwhelming honour paid,
Or recognised, at least, in life,
Which this most sweet and noble maid
Should yield to him who call'd her wife.

4

I fix'd this rule : in Sarum Close
To make two visits every week,
The first, to-day ; and, save on those,
I nought would do, think, read, or speak,
Which did not help my settled will
To earn the Statesman's proud applause.
And now, forthwith, to mend my skill
In ethics, politics, and laws,
The Statesman's learning ! Flush'd with power
And pride of freshly-form'd resolve,
I read Helvetius half-an-hour ;
But, halting in attempts to solve
Why, more than all things else that be,
A lady's grace hath force to move
That sensitive appetency
Of intellectual good, call'd love,
Took Blackstone down, only to draw
My swift-deriving thoughts ere long

To love, which is the source of law,
And, like a king, can do no wrong.
I open'd Hyde, where loyal hearts,
With faith unpropp'd by precedent,
Began to play rebellious parts.
O, mighty stir that little meant !
How dull the crude plough'd-fields of fact
To me who trod the Elysian grove !
How idle all heroic act
By the least suffering of love !
I could not read ; so took my pen,
And thus commenced, in form of notes,
A Lecture for the Salisbury men,
With due regard to Tory votes :
" A road's a road, though worn to ruts ;
" They speed who travel straight therein ;
" But he who tacks and tries short cuts
" Gets fools' praise and a broken shin"—
And here I stopp'd in sheer despair ;
But, what to-day was thus begun,

I vow'd, up starting from my chair,
To-morrow should indeed be done ;
So loosed my chafing thoughts from school,
To play with fancy as they chose,
And then, according to my rule,
I dress'd, and came to Sarum Close.

5.

Ah, that sweet laugh ! Diviner sense
Did Nature, forming her, inspire
To omit the grosser elements
And make her all of air and fire !

6.

To-morrow, Cowes' Regatta fell :
The Dean would like his girls to go,
If I went too. " Most gladly." Well,
I did but break a foolish vow !
Unless Love's toil has love for prize,
(And then he's Hercules), above

All other contrarieties

Is labour contrary to love.

No fault of Love's, but nature's laws.

And Love, in idleness, lies quick ;

For as the worm whose powers make pause,

And swoon, through alteration sick,

The soul, its wingless state dissolved,

Awaits its nuptial-life complete,

All indolently self-convolved,

Cocoon'd in silken fancies sweet.

CANTO V.

The Queen's Room.

PRELUDES.

I.

Rejected.

"PERHAPS she's dancing somewhere now !"

The thoughts of light and music wake
 Sharp jealousies, that grow and grow
 Till silence and the darkness ache.
 He sees her step, so proud and gay,
 Which, ere he spake, foretold despair ;
 Thus did she look, on such a day,
 And such the fashion of her hair ;
 And thus 'she stood, when, stooping low,
 He took the bramble from her dress,

And thus she laugh'd and talk'd, whose "No"
Was sweeter than another's "Yes,"
He feeds on thoughts that most deject ;
He impudently feigns her charms,
So revered in his own respect,
Clasp'd dreadfully by other arms ;
And turns, and puts his brows, that ache,
Against the pillow where it's cold.
If only now his heart would break !
But, oh, how much a heart can hold.

II.

Rachel.

You loved her, and would lie all night
Thinking how beautiful she was,
And what to do for her delight.
Now both are bound with alien laws !
Be patient ; put your heart to school ;
Weep if you will, but not despair ;
The trust that nought goes wrong by rule
Should ease this load the many bear.
Love, if there's heav'n, shall meet his dues,
Though here unmatch'd, or match'd amiss ;
Meanwhile, the gentle cannot choose
But learn to love the lips they kiss.
Ne'er hurt the homely sister's ears
With Rachel's beauties ; secret be
The lofty mind whose lonely tears
Protest against mortality.

III.

The Heart's Prophecies.

BE not amazed at life; 'tis still
The mode of God with his elect
Their hopes exactly to fulfil
In times and ways they least expect.

THE QUEEN'S ROOM.

1.

THERE'S nothing happier than the days
 In which young Love makes every thought
 Pure as a bride's blush, when she says
 "I will" unto she knows not what ;
 And lovers, on the love-lit globe,
 For love's sweet sake, walk yet aloof,
 And hear Time weave the marriage-robe,
 Attraction warp and reverence woof !

2.

My Housekeeper, my Nurse of yore,
 Cried, as the latest carriage went,
 "Well, Mr. Felix, Sir, I'm sure
 "The morning's gone off excellent !
 "I never saw the show to pass
 "The ladies, in their fine fresh gowns,

- "So sweetly dancing on the grass,
 "To music with its ups and downs.
"We'd such work, Sir, to clean the plate ;
 "'Twas just the busy times of old.
"The Queen's Room, Sir, look'd quite like state.
 "Miss Smythe, when she went up, made bold
"To peep into the Rose Boudoir,
 " And cried, 'How charming ! all quite new ;'
"And wonder'd who it could be for.
 " All but Miss Honor look'd in too.
" But she's too proud to peep and pry.
 "None's like that sweet Miss Honor, Sir !
" Excuse my humbleness, but I
 " Pray Heav'n you'll get a wife like her !
" All poor folks love Miss Honor's ways
 " Better than money. Mrs. Rouse,
"Who ought to know a lady, says
 " No finer goes to Wilton House.
" Miss Bagshaw thought that dreary room
 " Had kill'd old Mrs. Vaughan with fright ;

"She would not sleep in such a tomb
 " For all her host was worth a night !
" Miss Fry, Sir, laugh'd ; they talk'd the rest
 " In French ; and French Sir's Greek to me.
" But, though they smiled, and seem'd to jest,
 " No love was lost, for I could see
" How serious-like Miss Honor was"—
 " Well, Nurse, this is not my affair.
" The ladies talk'd in French with cause.
 " Good-day ; and thank you for your prayer."

3.

I loiter'd through the vacant house,
 Soon to be hers ; in one room stay'd,
Of old my mother's. Here my vows
 Of endless thanks were oftenest paid.
This room its first condition kept ;
 For, on the road to Sarum Town,
Therein an English Queen had slept,
 Before the Hurst was half pull'd down.

The pictured walls the place became :

Here ran the Brook Anaurus, where
Stout Jason bore the wrinkled dame

Whom serving changed to Juno ; there,
Ixion's selfish hope, instead

Of the nuptial goddess, clasp'd a cloud ;
And, here, translated Psyche fed

Her gaze on Love, not disallow'd.

4.

And in this chamber had she been,

And into that she would not look,
My Joy, my Vanity, my Queen,

At whose dear name my pulses shook !
To others how express at all

My worship in that joyful shrine ?
I scarcely can myself recall

What peace and ardour then were mine !

And how more sweet than aught below,
The daylight and its duties done,
It felt to fold the hands, and so
Relinquish all regards but one ;
To see her features in the dark,
To lie and meditate once more
The grace I did not fully mark,
The tone I had not heard before ;
And from my pillow then to take
Her notes, her picture, and her glove,
Put there for joy when I should wake,
And press them to the heart of love ;
And then to whisper " Wife ! " and pray
To live so long as not to miss
That unimaginable day
Which farther seems the nearer 'tis ;
And still from joy's unfathom'd well
To drink, in dreams, while on her brows
Of innocence ineffable
Blossom'd the laughing bridal rose.

a

CANTO VI.

The Love-Letters.

PRELUDES.

I.

Love's Perversity.

How strange a thing a lover seems
 To animals that do not love !
 Lo, where he walks and talks in dreams,
 And flouts us with his Lady's glove ;
 How foreign is the garb he wears ;
 And how his great devotion mocks
 Our poor propriety, and scares
 The undevout with paradox !
 His soul, through scorn of worldly care,
 And great extremes of sweet and gall,

And musing much on all that's fair,
Grows witty and fantastical ;
He sobs his joy and sings his grief,
And evermore finds such delight
In simply picturing his relief,
That 'plaining seems to cure his plight ;
He makes his sorrow, when there's none ;
His fancy blows both cold and hot ;
Next to the wish that she'll be won,
His first hope is that she may not ;
He sues, yet deprecates consent ;
Would she be captured she must fly ;
She looks too happy and content,
For whose least pleasure he would die ;
Oh, cruelty, she cannot care
For one to whom she's always kind !
He says he's nought, but, oh, despair,
If he's not Jove to her fond mind !
He's jealous if she pets a dove,
She must be his with all her soul ;

Yet 'tis a postulate in love
That part is greater than the whole,
And all his apprehension's stress,
When he's with her, regards her hair,
Her hand, a ribbon of her dress,
As if his life were only there ;
Because she's constant, he will change,
And kindest glances coldly meet,
And, all the time he seems so strange,
His soul is fawning at her feet ;
Of smiles and simple heaven grown tired,
He wickedly provokes her tears,
And when she weeps, as he desired,
Falls slain with ecstasies of fears ;
He blames her, though she has no fault,
Except the folly to be his ;
He worships her, the more to exalt
The profanation of a kiss ;
Health's his disease ; he's never well
But when his paleness shames her rose ;

His faith's a rock-built citadel,
 Its sign a flag that each way blows ;
His o'erfed fancy frets and fumes ;
 And Love, in him, is fierce like Hate,
And ruffles his ambrosial plumes
 Against the bars of time and fate.

II

The Power of Love.

SAMSON the Mighty, Solomon

The Wise, and Holy David all

Must doff their crowns to Love, for none

But fell as Love would scorn to fall!

And what may fallen spirits win,

When stripes and precepts cannot move?

Only the sadness of all sin,

When look'd at in the light of Love.

THE LOVE-LETTERS.

I.

- " You ask, Will admiration halt,
 " Should time divulge some hidden mote ?
" Oh, how I wish I knew that fault,
 " That I, who do but love, might doat !
" You who have stoop'd to my estate
 " Will I so constantly admire,
" Yourself yourself shall emulate,
 " And be yourself your own desire.
" I'll nobly mirror you too fair,
 " And, when you're false to me your glass,
" What's wanting you'll by that repair,
 " So bring yourself through me to pass.
" O Dearest, tell me how to prove
 " Goodwill which cannot be express'd ;
- !

- “The beneficial heart of love
“Is labour in an idle breast.
“Name in the world your chosen part,
“And here I vow, with all the bent
“And application of my heart
“To give myself to your content.
“Would you live on, home-worshipp’d, thus,
“Not proudly high nor poorly low ?
“Indeed the lines are fall’n to us
“In pleasant places ! Be it so.
“But would you others heav’nward move,
“By sight not faith, while you they admire ?
“I’ll help with zeal, as I approve,
“That just and merciful desire.
“High as the lonely moon to view
“I’ll lift your light ; do you decree
“Your place, I’ll win it ; for from you
“Command inspires capacity.
“Or, unseen, would you sway the world
“More surely ? Then in loftiest rhyme

"I'll raise your emblem, fair unfurl'd
"With blessing in the breeze of time.
"Faith removes mountains, much more love ;
"Let your contempt abolish me
"If aught of your devisal prove
"Too hard or high to do or be."

2.

I ended. "From your Sweet-Heart, Sir,"
Said Nurse, "The Dean's man brings it down."
could have kiss'd both him and her !
"Nurse, give him that, with half-a-crown."
How beat my heart, how paused my breath,
When, with perversely fond delay,
I broke the seal, that bore a wreath
Of roses link'd with one of bay.

3.

"I found your note. How very kind
"To leave it there ! I cannot tell

"How happy I am, or how you find

"Words to express your thoughts so well.

"The Girls are going to the Ball

"At Wilton. If you can, Dear, come :

"And every day this week you call

"You'll find Papa and me at home.

"You said to Mary once—I hope

"In jest—that women should be vain :

"On Saturday your friend, (her Pope,)

"The Bishop dined with us again.

"She put the question, if they ought ?

"He turn'd it cleverly away,

"(For giddy Mildred cried, she thought

"We must,) with 'What we must we may.'

"Dear Papa laugh'd, and said 'twas sad

"To think how vain his girls would be,

"Above all Mary, now she had

"Episcopal authority.

"But I was very dull, dear friend,

"And went upstairs at last, and cried.

" Be sure to come to-day, or send

" A rose-leaf kiss'd on either side.

" Adieu ! I am not well. Last night

" My dreams were wild ; I often woke,

" The summer-lightning was so bright ;

" And when it flash'd I thought you spoke."

CANTO VII.

The Rebulsion.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Pearl.

SAY, Muse, who warblest at mine ear
 That Prothalamium jubilant
 Which I, in weakness and in fear,
 Repeat, and of its glory scant,
 Say, what of those who are not wives,
 Nor have them ; tell what fate they prove
 Who keep the pearl which happier lives
 Cast in the costly cup of love ?
 I answer, (for the sacred Muse
 Is dumb,) " Ill chance is not for aye ;

- "But who with erring preference choose
 "The sad and solitary way,
"And think peculiar praise to get
 "In heaven, where error is not known,
"They have the separate coronet
 "They sought, but miss a worthier crown.
"Virgins are they, before the Lord,
 "Whose hearts are pure. The vestal fire
"Is not, as some misread the Word,
 "By marriage quench'd, but flames the higher."

II.

Joy and Use.

CAN aught compared with wedlock be
For use ? But He who made the heart
To use proportions joy. What He
Has join'd let no man put apart.
Sweet Order has its draught of bliss
Graced with the pearl of God's consent,
Ten times delightful in that 'tis
Considerate and innocent.
In vain Disorder grasps the cup ;
The pleasure's not enjoy'd but spilt,
And, if he stoops to lick it up,
It only tastes of earth and guilt.
His sorry raptures rest destroys ;
To live, like comets, they must roam ;
On settled poles turn solid joys,
And sunlike pleasures shine at home.

III.

"She was Mine."

"THY tears o'erprize thy loss ! Thy wife,
" In what was she particular ?
" Others of comely face and life,
" Others as chaste and warm there are,
" And when they speak they seem to sing ;
" Beyond her sex she was not wise ;
" And there is no more common thing
" Than kindness in a woman's eyes.
" Then wherefore weep so long and fast,
" Why so exceedingly repine !
" Say, how has thy Beloved surpass'd
" So much all others ?" " She was mine."

•

IV.

Rods and Kisses.

ALL blessings ask a blessed mood ;

 The garnish here is more than meat ;

Happy who takes sweet gratitude ;

 Next best, though bitter, is regret.

'Tis well if, on the tempest's gloom,

 You see the covenant of God ;

But far, far happier he on whom

 The kiss works better than the rod.

THE REVULSION.

I.

'Twas when the spousal time of May
Hangs all the hedge with bridal wreaths,
And air's so sweet the bosom gay
Gives thanks for every breath it breathes,
When like to like is gladly moved,
And each thing joins in Spring's refrain,
"Let those love now, who never loved ;
"Let those who have loved love again ;"
That I, in whom the sweet time wrought,
Lay stretch'd within a lonely glade,
Abandon'd to delicious thought
Beneath the softly twinkling shade.
The leaves, all stirring, mimick'd well
A neighbouring rush of rivers cold,
And, as the sun or shadow fell,
So these were green and those were gold ;

In dim recesses hyacinths droop'd,
And breadths of primrose lit the air,
Which, wandering through the woodland, stoop'd
And gather'd perfumes here and there ;
Upon the spray the squirrel swung,
And careless songsters, six or seven,
Sang lofty songs the leaves among,
Fit for their only listener, Heaven.
I sigh'd, "Immeasurable bliss
"Gains nothing by becoming more !
"Millions have meaning ; after this
"Cyphers forget the integer."

2.

And so I mused, till musing brought
A dream that shook my house of clay,
And, in my humbled heart, I thought,
To me there yet may come a day
When o'er my head great waters roll,
And this poor hope is all I have

That faith, though helpless to console,
 May still be strong enough to save ;
And this the single vestige seen
 Of comfort, earthly or divine,
My sorrow some day must have been
 Her portion, had it not been mine.
Then I, who knew, from watching life,
 That blows foreseen are slow to fall,
Rehearsed the losing of a wife,
 And faced its terrors each and all.
The self-chastising fancy show'd
 The coffin with its ghastly breath ;
The innocent sweet face that owed
 None of its innocence to death ;
The lips that used to laugh ; the knell
 That bade the world beware of mirth ;
The heartless and intolerable
 Indignity of "earth to earth ;"
At morn remembering by degrees
 That she I dream'd about was dead ;

Love's still recurrent jubilees,
The days that she was born, won, wed ;
The duties of my life the same,
Their meaning for the feelings gone ;
Friendship impertinent, and fame
Disgusting ; and, more harrowing none,
Small household troubles fall'n to me,
As, "What time would I dine to-day ?"
And, oh, how could I bear to see
Her noisy children at their play.
Besides, where all things limp and halt,
Could I go straight, should I alone
Have kept my love without default
Pitch'd at the true and heavenly tone ?
The festal-day might come to mind
That miss'd the gift which more endears ;
The hour which might have been more kind,
And now less fertile in vain tears ;
The good of common intercourse,
For daintier graces then despised,

Now with what passionate remorse,
What poignancy of hunger prized !
The little wrong, now greatly rued,
Which no repentance now could right ;
And love, in disbelieving mood,
Deserting his celestial height.
Withal to know, God's love sent grief
To make me less the world's, and more
Meek-hearted ; ah, what sick relief !
Why bow'd I not my heart before ?

3.

"O, Heaven," I cried, with chill alarm,
"If this fantastic horror shows
"The feature of an actual harm !"
And, coming straight to Sarum Close,
As one who dreams his wife is dead,
And cannot in his slumber weep,

And moans upon his wretched bed,
And wakes, and finds her there asleep,
And laughs and sighs, so I, not less
Relieved, beheld, with blissful start,
The light and happy loveliness
Which lay so heavy on my heart.

CANTO VIII.

The Kob-i-Noor.

PRELUDES.

I.

In Love.

If he's capricious she'll be so,
 But, if his duties constant are,
 She lets her loving favour glow
 As steady as a tropic star ;
 Appears there nought for which to weep,
 She'll weep for nought, for his dear sake ;
 She clasps her sister in her sleep ;
 Her love in dreams is most awake.

Her soul, that once with pleasure shook,
Did any eyes her beauty own,
Now wonders how they dare to look
On what belongs to him alone ;
The indignity of taking gifts
Exhilarates her loving breast ;
A rapture of submission lifts
Her life into celestial rest ;
There's nothing left of what she was ;
Back to the babe the woman dies,
And all the wisdom that she has
Is to love him for being wise.
She's confident because she fears ;
And, though discreet when he's away,
If none but her dear despot hears,
She prattles like a child at play.
Perchance, when all her praise is said,
He tells the news, a battle won,
On either side ten thousand dead.
" Alas !" she says ; but, if 'twere known,

She thinks, " He's looking on my face !

 " I am his joy ; whate'er I do,

" He sees such time-contenting grace

 " In that, he'd have me always so !"

And, evermore, for either's sake,

 To the sweet folly of the dove,

She joins the cunning of the snake,

 To rivet and exalt his love ;

Her mode of candour is deceit ;

 And what she thinks from what she'll say,

(Although I'll never call her cheat),

 Lies far as Scotland from Cathay.

Without his knowledge he was won ;

 Against his nature kept devout ;

She'll never tell him how 'twas done,

 And he will never find it out.

If, sudden, he suspects her wiles,

 And hears her forging chain and trap,

And looks, she sits in simple smiles,

 Her two hands lying in her lap.

Her secret, (privilege of the Bard,
Whose fancy is of either sex,)
Is mine ; but let the darkness guard
Myst'ries that light would more perplex !

II.

Love Thinking.

WHAT lifts her in my thought so far
Beyond all else ? Let Love not err !
'Tis that which all right women are,
But which I'll know in none but her.
She is to me the only Ark
Of that high mystery which locks
The lips of joy, or speaks in dark
Enigmas and in paradox ;
That potent charm, which none can fly,
Nor would, which makes me bond and free,
Nor can I tell if first 'twas I
Chose it, or it elected me ;
Which, when I look intentest, lo,
Cheats most mine eyes, albeit my heart,
Content to feel and not to know,
Perceives it all in every part ;

I kiss its cheek ; its life divine
Exhales from its resplendent shroud ;
Ixion's fate reversed is mine,
Authentic Juno seems a cloud ;
I feel a blessed warmth, I see
A bright circumference of rays,
But darkness, where the sun should be,
Fills admiration with amaze ;
And when, for joy's relief, I think
To fathom with the line of thought
The well from which I, blissful, drink,
The spring's so deep I come to nought.

III.

The Kiss.

"I SAW you take his kiss !" "'Tis true."

"O, modesty !" "'Twas strictly kept :

"He thought me asleep ; at least, I knew

"He thought I thought he thought I slept."

THE KOH-I-NOOR.

I.

"Be man's hard virtues highly wrought,
 " But let my gentle Mistress be,
" In every look, word, deed, and thought,
 " Nothing but sweet and womanly !
" Her virtues please my virtuous mood,
 " But what at all times I admire
" Is, not that she is wise or good,
 " But just the thing which I desire.
" With versatility to bring
 " Her mental tone to any strain,
" If oft'nest she is anything,
 " Be it thoughtless, talkative, and vain.
" That seems in her supremest grace
 " Which, virtue or not, apprises me
" That my familiar thoughts embrace
 " Unfathomable mystery."

2.

I answer'd thus ; for she desired
To know what mind I most approved
Partly to learn what she inquired,
Partly to get the praise she loved.

3.

I praised her, but no praise could fill
The depths of her desire to please,
Though dull to others as a Will
To them that have no legacies.
The more I praised the more she shone,
Her eyes incredulously bright,
And all her happy beauty blown
Beneath the beams of my delight.
Sweet rivalry was thus begot ;
By turns, my speech, in passion's style,
With flatteries the truth o'ershot,
And she surpass'd them with her smile.

“ You have my heart so sweetly seized,
“ And I confess, nay, ’tis my pride
“ That I’m with you so solely pleased,
“ That, if I’m pleased with aught beside,
“ As music, or the month of June,
“ My friend’s devotion, or his wit,
“ A rose, a rainbow, or the moon,
“ It is that you illustrate it.
“ All these are parts where you’re the whole!
“ You fit the taste for Paradise,
“ To which your charms draw up the soul
“ As turning spirals draw the eyes.
“ Nature to you was more than kind ;
“ ’Twas fond perversity to dress
“ So much simplicity of mind
“ In such a pomp of loveliness !
“ But, praising you, the fancy deft
“ Flies wide, and lets the quarry stray,
“ And when all’s said, there’s something left,
“ And that’s the thing I meant to say.”

"Dear Felix!" "Sweet, sweet Love!" But there
Was Aunt Maude's noisy ring and knock!

"Stay, Felix; you have caught my hair.

"Stoop! Thank you!" "May I have that lock?"

"Not now. Good morning, Aunt!" "Why, Puss,

"You look magnificent to-day."

"Here's Felix, Aunt." "Fox and green goose!

"Who handsome gets should handsome pay."

"Aunt, you are friends!" "Ah, to be sure!

"Good morning! Go on flattering, Sir;

"A woman's like the Koh-i-noor,

"Worth just the price that's put on her."

CANTO IX.

The Friends.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Gracious Chivalry.

I do and ever shall profess
 That I more tenderly revere
 A woman in her gentleness
 Than all things else I love or fear ;
 But false to love and ladies he
 Who, scarf on arm and spear in rest,
 Assail'd the world with proof that she,
 Being his, was also nature's best.
 That chivalry do I proclaim
 Alone substantial, wise, and good,

Which scorns to help one woman's fame
With treason against all womanhood.
Each maid, (albeit to me my own
Appears and is past others rare,)
Where aptness makes her beauty known
May seem as singularly fair ;
And each is justly most desired ;
And no true knight will care to prove
That there is more of what's admired
In his than in another's love.

II.

The Nursling of Civility.

Lo, how the woman once was woo'd :
Forth leapt the savage from his lair,
And fell'd her, and to nuptials rude
He dragg'd her, bleeding, by the hair.
From that to Chloe's dainty wiles
And Portia's dignified consent,
What distance ! But these Pagan styles
How far below Time's fair intent !
Siegfried sued Kriemhild. Sweeter life
Could Love's self covet ? Ballads teach
In what rough sort he chid his wife
For want of curb upon her speech !
Shall Love, where last I leave him, halt ?
Nay ; none can fancy or foresee
To how strange bliss may time exalt
This nursling of civility.

III.

Love Liberal.

THOUGH bonded unto one, my best,
My faith to whom is joy and ease,
Shall I despise or shun the rest
Of nature's queens and priestesses ?
Rather by loving one I learn
To love her like, who still recall
My nuptial pale, and teach in turn
That faith to one is debt to all ;
For I'm not of so dull a wit
As not to know that what I admire
And the sweet joy of loving it
Would both be slain by false desire.
Therefore, though singly hers till death,
(And after, I hope,) with all I'm free,
Inhaling love's delighted breath
In the bright air of chastity.

IV.

Disappointment.

"THE bliss which woman's charms bespeak,

I've sought in many, found in none !"

"In many 'tis in vain you seek

What only can be found in one."

THE FRIENDS.

I.

FRANK's long, dull letter, lying by
 The gay sash from Honoria's waist,
 Reproach'd me ; passion spared a sigh
 For friendship without fault disgraced.
 How should I greet him ? how pretend
 I felt the love he once inspired ?
 Time was when either, in his friend,
 His own deserts with joy admired ;
 We took one side in school-debate,
 Like hopes pursued with equal thirst,
 Were even-bracketed by Fate,
 Twin-Wrangers, seventh from the First ;
 And either loved a lady's laugh
 More than all music ; he and I
 Were perfect in the pleasant half
 Of universal charity.

2.

From pride of likeness thus I loved
Him, and he me, till love begot
The lowliness which now approved
Nothing but that which I was not.
Blest was the pride of feeling so
Subjected to a girl's soft reign !
She was my vanity, and, oh,
All other vanities how vain !

3.

Frank follow'd in his letter's track,
And set my guilty heart at ease
By paying my excuses back
With just the same apologies.
So he had slighted me as well !
Like fortune also paved the way
For what I sought excuse to tell.
He dined at Wilton yesterday,
He said, and met Miss Churchill there :
Save one, none lovelier had he seen !

"You said the Wiltshire girls were fair,
"But never mention'd her, their queen."
How sweet to hear him praise her charms!
For love, like faith, however sure,
With slightest confirmation warms,
And feels its great assurance more!
"Have you not heard then? She and I,
"Grant Heav'n we both may live so long,
"Are to be married next July.
"Is she not lovely! I did wrong
"Never to tell you, Frank—" But he,
Showing a miniature, turn'd red.
"Charming!" I cried; and Frank, "You'll be "My Groom's-man, Vaughan? In June we wed."

4.

Each, rapturous, praised his lady's worth;
He eloquently thus: "Her face
"Is the summ'd sweetness of the earth,
"Her soul the glass of heaven's grace,

- “ To which she leads me by the hand ;
 “ Or, briefly all the truth to say
“ To you, who briefly understand,
 “ She is both heaven and the way.
“ She charms with manners pure and high,
 “ The fruit of an ancestral tree,
“ And a devout life, govern'd by
 “ The rubric of civility ;
“ Displeasures and resentments pass
 “ Athwart her charitable eyes
“ More fleetingly than breath from glass,
 “ Or truth from foolish memories ;
“ Her heart's so touch'd with others' woes
 “ She has no need of chastisement ;
“ Her gentle life's conditions close,
 “ Like God's commandments, with content,
“ And make an aspect calm and gay,
 “ Where sweet affections come and go,
“ Till all who see her, smile, and say,
 “ ‘ How fair, and happy that she's so !’
“ She is so lovely, true, and pure,
 “ Her virtue all virtue so endears,

"That often, when I think of her,

"Life's meanness fills mine eyes with tears"—

"You paint Miss Churchill ! Pray go on"—

"She's perfect, and, if joy was much

"To think her nature's paragon,

"'Tis more that there's another such !"

5.

Praising and paying back the praise

Of our sweet girls, t'ward Sarum Spire

We walk'd, in evening's golden haze,

Friendship from passion stealing fire.

In joy's crown danced the feather jest,

And, parting by the Deanery door,

Clasp'd hands, less shy than words, confess'd

We had not been true friends before.

CANTO X.

The Epitaph.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Last Night at Home.

O, MUSE, who dost to me reveal
 The mystery of the woman's life,
 Relate how 'tis a maid might feel,
 The night before she's crown'd a wife!
 Lo, sleepless in her little bed,
 She lies and counts the hours till noon.
 Ere this, to-morrow, she'll be wed,
 Ere this? Alas, how strangely soon!
 A fearful blank of ignorance
 Lies, manifest, across her way,

And shadows, cast from unknown chance,
 Make sad and dim the coming day.
Her faithless dread she now discards,
 And now remorseful memory flings
Its glory round the last regards
 Of home and all accustom'd things.
Her father's voice, her mother's eyes
 Accuse her treason ; 'tis in vain
She thinks herself a wife, and tries
 To comprehend the greater gain ;
Her unknown fortune nothing cheers
 Her loving heart's familiar loss,
And torrents of repentant tears
 Their hot and smarting threshold cross.
When first within her bosom Love
 Took birth, and beat his blissful wings,
It seem'd to lift her mind above
 All care for other earthly things ;
But, oh, too lightly did she vow
 To leave for aye her happy nest ;
And dreadful is the thought that now
 Assaults her weak and shaken breast :

Ah, should her lover's love abate ;
 Ah, should she, miserable, lose
All dear regards of maiden state,
 Dissolved by time and marriage dues !
And so her fears increase, till fear
 O'erfilms her apprehensive eye
That she may swoon, with no one near,
 And haply so, unmarried, die.
With instinct of her ignorance,
 (The virgin's strength and veiled guide,)
She prays, and casts the reins of chance
 To Love, nor recks what shall betide.

II.

Frost in Harvest.

THE lover who, across a gulf
Of ceremony, views his Love,
And dares not yet address herself,
Pays worship to her stolen glove.
The gulf o'erleapt, the lover wed,
It happens oft, (let truth be told,)
The halo leaves the sacred head,
Respect grows lax, and worship cold,
And all love's May-day promising,
Like songs of birds before they pair,
Or flush of flowers in boastful Spring,
Dies out, and leaves the Summer bare.
Yet should a man, it seems to me,
Honour what honourable is,
For some more honourable plea
Than only that it is not his.

The gentle wife, who decks his board
And makes his day to have no night,
Whose wishes wait upon her lord,
Who finds her own in his delight,
Is she another now than she
Who, mistress of her maiden charms,
At his wild prayer, incredibly
Committed them to his proud arms?
Unless her choice of him's a slur
Which makes her proper credit dim,
He never enough can honour her
Who past all speech has honour'd him.

III.

The Foreign Land.

A WOMAN is a foreign land,
Of which, though there he settle young,
A man will ne'er quite understand
The customs, politica, and tongue.
The foolish hie them post-haste through,
See fashions odd, and prospects fair,
Learn of the language, "How d'ye do,"
And go and brag that they've been there.
The most for leave to trade apply,
For once, at Empire's seat, her heart,
Then get what knowledge ear and eye
Glean chancewise in the life-long mart.
And certain others, few and fit,
Attach them to the Court, and see
The Country's best, its accent hit,
And partly sound its polity.

IV.

A Demonstration.

NATURE, with endless being rife,
Parts each thing into "him" and "her,"
And in the arithmetic of life,
The smallest unit is a pair;
And thus, oh, strange, sweet half of me,
If I confess a loftier flame,
If more I love high Heaven than thee,
I more than love thee, thee I am;
And, if the world's not built of lies,
Nor all a cheat the Gospel tells,
If that which from the dead shall rise
Be I indeed, not something else,
There's no position more secure
In reason or in faith than this,
That those conditions must endure,
Which, wanting, I myself should miss.

V.

Felicity.

To marry her and take her home !
The poet, painting pureness, tells
Of lilies ; figures power by Rome ;
And each thing shows by something else ;
But through the songs of poets look,
And who so happy to have found
In universal nature's book
A likeness for a life so crown'd !
Here they speak best who best express
Their inability to speak,
And none are strong, but who confess
With happy skill that they are weak.

VI.

Marriage Indissoluble.

"In heaven none marry." Grant the most
Which may by this vague word be meant,
Who shall forbid the eternal boast,
"I kiss'd those lips with her consent!"
If here, to love, past favor is
A present boast, delight, and chain,
What lacks of honor, bond, and bliss,
Where Now and Then are no more twain !

THE EPITAPH.

I.

"At Church, in twelve hours more, we meet !

This, Dearest, is our last farewell."

"Oh, Felix, do you love me ?" "Sweet,

Why do you ask ?" "I cannot tell."

2.

And was it no vain fantasy

That raised me from the earth with pride ?

Should I to-morrow verily

Be Bridegroom, and Honoria Bride ?

Should I, in simple fact, henceforth

Live unconditionally lord

Of her whose smile for brightest worth

Seem'd all too bountiful reward ?

Live one with her I worshipp'd, chain'd
By links indissolubly wrought ?
Oh, bliss too much for bliss ; it strain'd
The feelings and oppress'd the thought.
Incredible life's promise seem'd,
Or, credible, for life too great ;
Love his own deity blasphemed,
And doff'd at last his heavenly state.
What force, if man could mount so high,
To further insolence set bars,
And kept the chaste moon in the sky,
And bade him not tread out the stars !

3.

Patience and hope had parted truce,
And, sun-like, love obscured his ray
With dazzling mists, driven up profuse
Before his own triumphant way.
But should I thus neglect my pledge
Still to maintain love's stately mood ?

(Remembering haste is sacrilege
In heaven !) For peace in vain I sued.
I thought with prayer how Jacob paid
The patient price of Rachel ; then,
Of that pure grace Tobias said,
And Sarah's innocent " Amen."
Without avail ! O'erwhelming wealth,
The wondrous gift of God so near,
Which should have been delight and health,
Made heart and spirit sick and sere.

4.

But Heav'n, who often grants us nought,
Till, weary, we have ceased to ask,
Absolved me now from restless thought,
And put aside the cloudy mask.
The self-forgetting soul of love,
That recks not of its own delight,
Like morning bade the mists remove,
And then once more I breathed aright ;

And I rehears'd my marriage vow,
And swore her welfare to prefer
To all things, and for aye as now
To live, not for myself, but her.
Forth, from the glittering spirit's peace
And gaiety ineffable,
Stream'd to the heart delight and ease,
As from an overflowing well ;
And, orderly deriving thence
Its pleasure perfect and allow'd,
Bright with the spirit shone the sense,
As with the sun a fleecy cloud.
If now to part with her could make
Her pleasure greater, sorrow less,
I for my epitaph would take
"To serve seem'd more than to possess."
And I perceived, (the vision sweet
Dimming with happy dew mine eyes,)
That love and joy are torches lit
From altar-fires of sacrifice.

5.

Across the sky the daylight crept,
And birds grew garrulous in the grove,
And on my marriage-morn I slept
A soft sleep, undisturb'd by love.

CANTO XI.

The Wedding.

PRELUDES.

I.

Platonic Love.

RIGHT art thou who wouldst rather be
 A doorkeeper in Love's fair house,
 Than lead the wretched revelry
 Where fools at swinish troughs carouse.
 But do not boast of being least ;
 And if to kiss thy Mistress' skirt
 Amaze thy brain, scorn not the Priest
 Whom greater honours do not hurt.
 Stand off and gaze, if more than this
 Be more than thou canst understand,

Revering him whose power of bliss,
 Angelic, dares to seize her hand,
Or whose seraphic love makes flight
 To the apprehension of her lips ;
And think, the sun of such delight
 From thine own shadow takes eclipse.
And, wouldst thou to the same aspire,
 This is the art thou must employ,
Live rightly ; so shalt thou acquire
 Unknown capacities of joy.

II.

The Symbol.

As if I chafed the sparks from glass,
And said, "It lightens," hitherto
The songs I've made of love may pass
For all but for proportion true ;
But likeness and proportion both
Now fail, as if a child in glee,
Catching the flakes of the salt froth,
Cried, "Look, my mother, here's the sea."
Yet, by the help of what's so weak,
But not diverse, to those who know,
And only unto those I speak,
May far-inferring fancy show
Love's living sea by coasts uncurb'd,
Its depth, its mystery, and its might,
Its indignation if disturb'd,
The glittering peace of its delight.

III.

Love of Loves.

"THE man seeks first to please his wife,"

Declares, but not complains, Saint Paul ;

And other loves have little life

Where she's not loved the most of all.

We cannot weigh or measure love ;

And this excess, assure you well,

If sinful, is a sin whereot

Only the best are capable.

IV.

Constancy rewarded.

I vow'd unvarying faith, and she,
To whom in full I pay that vow,
Rewards me with variety
Which men who change can never know.

THE WEDDING.

I.

LIFE smitten with a feverish chill,
The brain too tired to understand,
In apathy of heart and will,
I took the woman from the hand
Of him who stood for God, and heard
Of Christ, and of the Church his Bride ;
The Feast, by presence of the Lord
And his first Wonder, beautified ;
The mystic sense to Christian men ;
The bonds in innocency made,
And gravely to be enter'd then
For children, godliness, and aid,
And honour'd, and kept free from smirch ;
And how a man must love his wife
No less than Christ did love his Church,
If need be, giving her his life ;

And, vowing then the mutual vow,
The tongue spake, but intention slept.
'Tis well for us Heaven asks not how
This oath is sworn, but how 'tis kept.

2.

O, bold seal of a bashful bond,
Which makes the marriage-day to be,
To those before it and beyond,
An ice-berg in an Indian sea!

3.

"Now, while she's changing," said the Dean,
"Her bridal for her travelling dress,
"I'll preach allegiance to your queen!
"Preaching's the trade which I profess;
"And one more minute's mine! You know
"I've paid my girl a father's debt,
"And this last charge is all I owe.
"She's yours; but I love more than yet

- " You can ; such fondness only wakes
 " When time has raised the heart above
" The prejudice of youth, which makes
 " Beauty conditional to love.
" Prepare to meet the weak alarms
 " Of novel nearness ; recollect
" The eye which magnifies her charms
 " Is microscopic for defect.
" Fear comes at first ; but soon, rejoiced,
 " You'll find your strong and tender loves
" Like holy rocks by Druids poised,
 " The least force shakes, but none removes.
" Although you smile, there's much to mend !
 " Yet never girl, I think, had less.
" Her worst point is, she's apt to spend
 " Too much on alms-deeds and on dress.
" Her strength is your esteem ; beware
 " Of finding fault ; her will's unnerv'd
" By blame ; from you 'twould be despair ;
 " But praise that is not quite deserv'd

- “ Will all her noble nature move
 “ To make your utmost wishes true.
“ Yet think, while mending thus your Love,
 “ Of matching her ideal too !
“ The death of nuptial joy is sloth :
 “ To keep your mistress in your wife,
“ Keep to the very height your oath,
 “ And honour her with arduous life.
“ Lastly, no personal reverence doff.
 “ Life’s all externals unto those
“ Who pluck the blushing petals off,
 “ To find the secret of the rose.—
“ How long she’s staying ! Green’s Hotel
 “ I’m sure you’ll like. The charge is fair,
“ The wines good. I remember well
 “ I stopp’d once, with her mother, there.
“ A tender conscience of her vow
 “ That mother had ! She is so like her !”
But Mrs. Fife, much flurried, now
Whisper’d, “ Miss Honor’s ready, Sir.”

4.

"Adieu, dear, dear Papa, adieu !

"To-morrow I'll write." "No, Pet,—" "I will !

"You know I'm very happy ; and you

"Have Mary and Mildred with you still !

"Mary, you'll make Papa his tea

"At eight exactly. Au revoir !

"Only six weeks ! How soon 'twill be !"

Then on us two they shut the door.

5.

I, disconcerted, tax'd my thought

To keep my Bride in countenance,

But, whilst for words I vainly sought,

Her voice released my own from trance.

"Look, is not this a lovely shawl ?"

"Yes !" "Aunt Maude gave it me." "How kind ?"

"The new wing spoils Sir John's old Hall :

"You'll see it, if you pull that blind."

6.

I drew the silk : in heaven the night
Was dawning ; lovely Venus shone,
In languishment of tearful light,
Swathed by the red breath of the sun.

CANTO XII.

Husband and Wife.

PRELUDES.

I.

The Married Lover.

WHY, having won her, do I woo ?

Because her spirit's vestal grace
Provokes me always to pursue,

But, spirit-like, eludes embrace ;
Because her womanhood is such

That, as on court-days subjects kiss
The Queen's hand, yet so near a touch

Affirms no mean familiarity,
Nay, rather marks more fair the height

Which can with safety so neglect
To dread, as lower ladies might,
That grace could meet with disrespect,

Thus she with happy favour feeds
Allegiance from a love so high
That thence no false conceit proceeds
Of difference bridged, or state put by ;
Because although in act and word
As lowly as a wife can be,
Her manners, when they call me lord,
Remind me 'tis by courtesy,
Not with her least consent of will,
Which would my proud affection hurt,
But by the noble style that still
Imputes an unattain'd desert ;
Because her gay and lofty brows,
When all is won which hope can ask,
Reflect a light of hopeless snows
That bright in virgin ether bask ;
Because, though free of the outer court
I am, this Temple keeps its shrine
Sacred to Heaven ; because, in short,
She's not and never shall be mine.

II.

The Amaranth.

FEASTS satiate ; stars disrtess with height ;

Friendship means well, but misses reach,
And wearies in its best delight,

Vex'd with the vanities of speech ;
Too long regarded, roses even

Afflict the mind with fond unrest ;
And to converse direct with Heaven

Is a great labour in the breast ;
Whate'er the up-looking soul admires,

Whate'er the senses' banquet be,
Fatigues at last with vain desires,

Or sickens by satiety ;
But truly my delight was more

In her to whom I'm bound for aye
Yesterday than the day before

And more to-day than yesterday.

III.

The Neglected Glove.

"THE badge you begg'd, your wooing done,
Lo, thus flung by!" He answers, "Love,"
Kissing her fingers one by one,
"Who has the hand neglects the glove."

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

I.

I, WHILE the shop-girl fitted on
 The sand-shoes, look'd where, down the bay,
 The sea glow'd with a shrouded sun.
 "I'm ready, Felix ; will you pay ?"
 That was my first expense for this
 Sweet stranger whom I call'd my wife.
 How light the touches are that kiss
 The music from the chords of life !

2.

Her feet, by half-a-mile of sea,
 In spotless sand left shapely prints ;
 With agates, then, she loaded me,
 (The lapidary call'd them flints) ;
 Then, at her wish, I hail'd a boat,
 To take her to the ships-of-war,
 At anchor, each a lazy mote
 Black in the brilliance, miles from shore.

3.

The morning breeze the canvas fill'd,
Lifting us o'er the bright-ridged gulf,
And every lurch my darling thrill'd
With light fear smiling at itself;
And, dashing past the Arrogant,
Asleep upon the restless wave
After its cruise in the Levant,
We reach'd the Wolf, and signal gave
For help to board ; with caution meet,
My bride was placed within the chair,
The red flag wrapp'd about her feet,
And so swung laughing through the air.

4.

"Look, Love," she said, "there's Frederick
Graham,
"My cousin, whom you met, you know."
And seeing us, the brave man came,
And made his frank and courteous bow,

And gave my hand a sailor's shake,
And said, "You ask'd me to the Hurst :
"I never thought my luck would make
"You and your wife my guests the first."
And Honor, cruel, "Nor did we :
"Have you not lately changed your ship ?"
"Yes : I'm commander, now," said he,
With a slight quiver of the lip.
We saw the vessel, shown with pride ;
Took luncheon ; I must eat his salt !
Parting he said, (I fear my bride
Found him unselfish to a fault,)
His wish, he saw, had come to pass,
(And so, indeed, her face express'd,)
That that should be, whatever 'twas,
Which made his Cousin happiest.
We left him looking from above ;
Rich bankrupt ! for he could afford
To say most proudly that his love
Was virtue and its own reward.
But others loved as well as he,
(Thought I, half-anger'd,) and if fate,

Unfair, had only fashion'd me
As hapless, I had been as great.

5.

As souls, ambitious, but low-born,
If raised past hope by luck or wit,
All pride of place will proudly scorn,
And live as they'd been used to it,
So we two wore our strange estate;
Familiar, unaffected, free,
We talk'd, until the dusk grew late,
Of this and that ; but, after tea,
As doubtful if a lot so sweet
As ours was ours in very sooth,
Like children, to promote conceit,
We feign'd that it was not the truth ;
And she assumed the maiden coy,
And I adored remorseless charms,
And then we clapp'd our hands for joy,
And ran into each other's arms.

THE EPILOGUE.

I.

"Ah, dearest wife, a fresh-lit fire
 "Sends forth to heaven great shows of fume,
 "And watchers, far away, admire;
 "But when the flames their power assume,
 "The more they burn the less they show,
 "The clouds no longer smirch the sky,
 "And then the flames intensest glow
 "When far-off watchers think they die.
 "The fumes of early love my verse
 "Has figured—" "You must paint the flame!"
 "'Twould merit the Promethean curse!
 "But now, Sweet, for your praise and blame."
 "You speak too boldly; veils are due
 "To women's feelings." "Fear not this!

"Women will vow I say not true,
 "And men believe the lips they kiss."
"I did not call you 'Dear' or 'Love,'
 "I think, till after Frank was born."
"That fault I cannot well remove ;
 "The rhymes"—but Frank now blew his horn,
And Walter bark'd on hands and knees,
 At Baby in the mignonette,
And all made, full-cry, for the trees
 Where Felix and his wife were set.
Again disturb'd, (crickets have cares !) .
 True to their annual use they rose,
To offer thanks at Evening Prayers
 In three times sacred Sarum Close.

2.

Passing, they left a gift of wine
 At Widow Neale's. Her daughter said :
"O, Ma'am, she's sinking ! For a sign,
 " She cried just now, of him that's dead,

“ ‘ Mary, he’s somewhere close above,
“ ‘ Weeping and wailing his dead wife,
“ ‘ With forceful prayers and fatal love
“ ‘ Conjuring me to come to life.
“ ‘ A spirit is terrible though dear !
“ ‘ It comes by night, and sucks my breath,
“ ‘ And draws me with desire and fear.’
“ Ah, Ma’am, she’ll soon be his in death !”

3.

Vaughan, when his kind wife’s eyes were dry,
Said, “ This thought crosses me, my Dove ;
“ If Heaven should proffer, when we die,
“ Some unconceived, superior love,
“ How take the exchange without despair,
“ Without worse folly how refuse ?”
But she, who, wise as she was fair,
For subtle doubts had simple clues,
Said, “ Custom sanctifies, and faith
“ Is more than joy ; we’ll not desire

"In any heaven a different path,
"Though, found at first, it had been higher
"Yet love makes death a dreadful thought !
"Felix, at what a price we live !"
But present pleasures soon forgot
The future's dread alternative ;
For, as became the festal time,
He cheer'd her heart with tender praise,
And speeches wanting only rhyme
To make them like his gallant lays.
He discommended girlhood, "What
"For sweetness like the ten-years' wife,
"Whose customary love is not
"Her passion, or her play, but life !
"With beauties so maturely fair,
"Affecting, mild, and manifold,
"May girlish charms no more compare
"Than apples green with apples gold.
"Ah, still unpraised Honoria, Heaven,
"When you into my arms it gave,
"Left nought hereafter to be given
"But grace to feel the good I have."

Her own and manhood's modesty
Made dumb her love, but, as they rode,
His hand in hers felt soft reply,
And like rejoinder fond bestow'd ;
And, when the carriage set them down,
"How strange," said he, "'twould seem to meet,
"When pacing, as we now this town,
"A Florence or a Lisbon street,
"That Laura or that Catherine, who,
"In the remote, romantic years,
"From Petrarch or Camoens drew
"Their verse and their immortal tears !"
But here their converse had its end ;
For, crossing the Cathedral Lawn,
There came an ancient college-friend,
Who, introduced to Mrs. Vaughan,
Lifted his hat, and bow'd and smiled,
And fill'd her handsome face with joy,
By patting on the cheek her child,
With, "Is he yours, this noble boy ?"

NOTE.

I AM indebted, for some appropriate thoughts, chiefly embodied in lines 23—40 of "Love's Perversity," to the prose essay, by Robert Waring, called Effigies Amoris. I have also to express my gratitude, rather, however, for the corroboration than suggestion of some others, to the Author of Deliciæ sapientiæ de amore conjugali. The concluding sentence of the piece called "The Pearl," is from Herrick.
